AN ACCOUNT OF £2000 LEVIED UPON THE COUNTY OF LANCASTER FOR THE USE OF THE PARLIAMENTARY ARMY IN 1643–4

By Lieut.-Colonel Henry Fishwick, F.S.A.

Read 15th February 1906

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR THOMAS FAIRFAX marched from Manchester to relieve the town of Nantwich, on the 21st January 1643–4; he took with him 2500 foot soldiers and 28 troops of horsemen. A few days afterwards the siege of Nantwich was raised and the king's army defeated.

It was shortly before Fairfax left Manchester that, in accordance with an order of the Lords and Commons, a meeting of Deputy-Lieutenants was held and a decision come to that the sum above named was to be collected in Lancashire, and, after the victory at Nantwich, it was ordered that the amount collected should be paid to Sir Thomas Fairfax for the use of his soldiers. The document exhibited to-night is the original account of the collector of this money; it was found amongst a bundle of old manuscripts, lately presented to the Rochdale Public Library and Museum.

As the assessments for the Hundreds of Blackburn and Salford were made by townships, and the Constables were appointed as the agent through whom the money was to be collected, the document is of much interest, as it not only furnishes a list of Constables for those two Divisions, but also the comparative assessable value of each township. Upon what basis this valuation was reckoned we have unfortunately no knowledge. Most of the townships paid the full sum demanded, but in a few places not more than one-half appears to have been received.

For the Hundreds of West Derby, Leyland, and Amounderness, the respective High Constables were empowered to collect the tax, whilst in Lonsdale agents were appointed by Colonel Doddinge. In the Hundreds of West Derby, Leyland, Lonsdale, and Amounderness, it appears that it was intended that a weekly charge for one month was to be collected, and the appeal did not receive a very liberal support in the first-named Hundred, where £480 was demanded; only £195, 4s. 6d. was paid, and in none of the others was the full sum realised, but Lonsdale was only about £20 short of the agreement. For the whole county the total amount received towards the £2000 was £1351, 3s. 3d.

The Treasurer for the county appointed by the Deputy-Lieutenants to receive all moneys collected for the purposes of the war was Humphrey Chetham of Clayton Hall; he was selected at a meeting in Manchester on 21st October 1643. On the 24th March 1643–4, General Fairfax complained that part of the £2000 was still unpaid, and "ordered the Treasurer" immediately upon the receipt of the said arrears to paye the same to Colonell John Lambert. In the accounts of Humphrey Chetham under the date 20th March 1643 is the item "Pd. Mr. Tho. St Nicholas in Manchester £100, 00. 00." According to the document now before us £300 was the amount then paid. The expenditure on maintenance of horses kept at Clayton for Sir Thomas Fairfax's troops was considerable, as shown by the details furnished in Mr. Sutton's "Life of Humphrey Chetham."[1]

Except for a reference to certain horses kept "in my stable at Clayton," there is nothing in the document to indicate that Humphrey Chetham was the Treasurer, but external evidence proves this is undoubtedly his account of the money collected.

Of Mr. Thomas St. Nicholas nothing is known, except that he appears to have acted as Treasurer to Sir Thomas Fairfax.

"An accompt of twoe thousand powndes charged upon this countie at a gen'all meetinge by the deputie Lieftennants a litle before that tyme S^ir^ Thomas Fairfax then Major gen'all of this and divers othir counties went vnto that searvice at Nantw^ch^ in Cheshire wch I was appointed to receive at that tyme as Treasurer and to make payment thereof or soe much as I should receive as afterwards by they deputie Lieftennts I should be diricted and after they were returned wth victorie from the said Searvice by gen'all consent of the said deputie Lieftennants I was charged to paie the said Twoe thousand pownds or soe much as I had or should receive therof vnto the said S^ir^ Thomas for his service in Cheshire and is by the said S^ir^ Thomas his appointment paid vnto him his Treasurer Mr. Thomas St Nicholas or others for his vse as followeth."

Objects in Bronze and Onyx Intaglio for Ring-setting found at Wilderspool in 1905

THE EXCAVATIONS ON THE ROMANO-BRITISH SITE AT WILDERSPOOL DURING 1905

By Thomas May, F.S.A. (Scot.)

Read 15th November 1906.

NO work has been done during the season just ended (1906) on the Romano-British site at Wilderspool, but during the autumn of 1905 excavation was continued by the writer, with the assistance of an experienced excavator, Mr. John Hallows (employed by the Museum Committee of the Warrington Corporation on condition of receiving the finds), in the home paddock of Messrs. Greenall, Whitley & Co., who very liberally renewed their permission upon the kind intervention of Lady Greenall of Walton Hall.

Commencing in the south-west corner of the field and proceeding northwards in geographical sequence and in the order of discovery, the remains of the Romano-British settlement uncovered or explored during 1905 (the season being a short one, owing to the smallness of the grant) may be summarised as consisting of eleven separate items, viz. six refuse pits (1–6); two courtyards or oblong areas paved with cobble-stones or small boulders (7–8); lines of clay bedding, rubble, and other traces of walling on east, south, and west belonging to a dwelling or workshop, and a clay floor partly covering the enclosure (9); the base of a reverberatory furnace of clay upon the west side of the floor (10); and a nailor's workshop, consisting of a pit in the ground set round with stone blocks for an anvil, &c., in front of a smithy-furnace of massive boulder-clay, to which there was a row of stepping-stones from the direction of the north Via (11).

The refuse pits were generally mere sinkings two or three feet below the original surface, and though sometimes deeper and roughly lined with clay or stones, they have only been examined and separately specified on account of their contents.

The subsoil, as previously stated, is a pure glacial sand-bed intercalated with beds of fine grey loam and water-bearing gravel, which renders the site a dry and salubrious one, and makes deep sinkings dangerous and unnecessary. It also renders the "forced soil" easy to distinguish for excavation purposes and easy to handle except where mixed with imported clay. The Roman stratum, elsewhere than in the refuse pits, is seldom more than 2 or 3 feet thick under about a foot of humus.

Refuse Pit (1) was outside the fortified area, 32 feet from the face of the west rampart, in the midst of the iron-smelting and glass furnaces described in my report for the seasons of 1899 and 1900 (Transactions, 1900, N.S., vol. xvi.). Its depth was 9 feet 6 inches, and, at 6 inches below the existing grass level, it was covered with a bed of hard yellow clay 12 feet square and from 6 inches to 1 foot 6 inches thick. The surface of the latter was much reddened by heat near the middle, where was a basin-shaped cavity 3 feet long by 2 feet 6 inches wide and 9 inches deep in the centre, calcined throughout, resembling a sunk hearth or base of a furnace. The pit, for a farther depth of 4 to 5 feet, was filled with masses of clay alternating with layers of ash-blackened sandy soil, which were too barren to repay removal, and were simply cut through on the south side. This confused mass seemed to consist of waste clay from broken-down furnaces or deposits for new constructions placed ready to hand. The lower portion of the pit, which was about 8 feet in diameter and 3 to 4 feet deep, contained ash-blackened sandy loam impregnated with shards of coarse red unglazed earthenware and amphoræ, decayed teeth of oxen and bits of charcoal, but nothing of special significance.

A fragment of cannel-coal was found at a depth of 1 foot 9 inches in the clay.

The remains of a cob-wall (rough stones and clay), 1 foot 6 inches wide, along the east side of the clay cover, and sandstone blocks roughly squared by cleavage on its surface, suggested that it had been utilised as the floor of a workman's hut.

Though the contents of the pit were so extremely meagre, the objects obtained in the substance of the clay floor, and from 6 inches to 2 feet below the surface of the surrounding soil (part of which had been recently removed to a modern sand-pit), were numerous and interesting, as confirming evidence of conclusions already indicated regarding the nature of the industries in progress close at hand during the Roman occupation, viz. glass-making and iron-smelting. They include :—

Coins.—A first brass and two second bronze coins of Trajan, in a bad state from wear and corrosion, found at depths of 7 inches, 1 foot, and 1 foot 3 inches respectively, a few feet from the north-west and south-west corners of the clay cover or floor. Owing to its condition, the larger coin was undecipherable. The lettering of the legends of the other two, so far as legible, are the following :—

Bronze.—Fastening-plate of a small hook or buckle, $\frac{3}{4}$ inch by $\frac{5}{8}$ inch and $\frac{1}{8}$ inch thick, has an oblong slot at one end, and the shank of a broken hook at the other, and is ornamented with a trellis pattern, marginal grooves, and pierced work (moulded).

Semi-lunette of thin sheet brass or bronze with small holes for rivets close to the margin.

Fragment, 2 inches by $1\frac{3}{4}$ inch and $\frac{1}{2}$ inch thick, from inside base of a crucible of greyish highly siliceous clay coated on the inside with green carbonate of bronze or copper.

Iron.—Several nails from 2 to 3 inches in length. Ring, $1\frac{1}{2}$ inch outside, 1 inch inside diameter.

Lead.—Triangular prism sharp edged, $\frac{7}{16}$ by $\frac{1}{2}$ inch on two sides, $\frac{3}{8}$ inch wide on the other, with a puncture $\frac{1}{8}$ inch deep and wide on one of the larger sides,—of unknown use, but would form an effective sling-bolt.

Strip, 3 inches by $\frac{1}{2}$ inch by $\frac{1}{8}$ inch.

Mass of torn and broken sheet weighing about 1 lb. rolled together.

Two small slabs, $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches by $1\frac{3}{4}$ inch and $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ inch thick, folded lengthwise and resembling tubes in process of manufacture.

Small lump found in the middle of the hearth.

Glass.—Several pieces, the largest about 2 inches square, from the bulge of two ribbed bowls of varying shades of pure glistening amber colour, thin, blown-moulded material and perfect technique. Portions of such bowls in dark-blue have been found in other localities (described as pillar-moulded), and a whole one at Silchester of sapphire blue streaked with white and with yellow spots (Archæologia, vol. lv., Part I., p. 231). They are assumed to be an importation from Italy, but as the Wilderspool specimens have been found near to a glass-maker's furnace along with numerous fragments, several amorphous lumps (massæ), and two parts of collapsed bottle-necks of similar material and evidently "cullet" (glass-maker's waste), it is not a mere assumption, but an inference based upon more or less complete evidence, that the bowls to which the fragments belong were made upon the spot.

Lower part of handle of ewer or bottle of amber glass.

Several fragments of square bottles of common bluish-green.

Ribbed bead, diameters $\frac{7}{8}$ inch by $\frac{1}{2}$ inch, string-hole $\frac{3}{8}$ inch, of translucent sapphire blue.

Pottery.—In addition to numerous fragments of black, grey, and red unglazed earthenware, and a few pieces of terra sigillata (Samian), there were one or two pottery specimens worthy of special mention, viz. :—

A small bit of terra nigra from the moulded rim of a large upright sided patera, represented by Figs. 1 or 2, Plate I., in the article on Terra Sigillata, Bonner Jahrbuecher, Part 96 (1895), p. 18, by Hans Dragendorff, wherein he has identified the types and determined the chronological sequence of this rare and early (first century) description of pottery.

Portion of the angular moulded rim of small urn of very hard grey paste (like porcelain) coated on the outside with black varnish, with a band of rough-cast round the middle of the bulge, and smooth polished above.

Portion of the rim of a larger urn of soft local brick-red clay coated with white slip, painted in red with small twigs here and there, and having two raised cordons round the upper portion of the bulge.

Large fragment (about half) of an "indented" urn of hard dark-brown paste and "rough-cast" surface, originally about 8 inches high, and 6 inches in diameter.

Miscellaneous.—One lump of red raddle (hæmatite ore), and two of clayband iron ore.

Several lumps of greyish-white vesicular scoriæ or slag.

A lump of barytes (identified by Professor Boyd Dawkins, D.D., F.S.A.).

A small piece of galena or lead ore.

A stone "rammer" and a "sleeker" similar to those found beside the closely adjoining moulder's floors described in my last preceding report (Transactions, 1904, N.S., vol. xx.).

A potter's "rib" or "sleeker" of cannel with worn rounded edges.

Angular splinter of calcined flint and many small splinters of white quartz pebbles. (These are specified owing to their connection with the manufacture of fine glass, and because the flint is an imported material.)

Refuse Pit (2) was situated about the same distance from the west rampart, on the outside, and 36 yards northwards from the preceding in a direct line. Its total depth was 9 feet, of which the lower portion was steined to a height of 4 feet with unhewn sandstone blocks set in stiff clay, forming a roughly squared shaft 4 feet 6 inches by 3 feet 6 inches across. The funnel-shaped upper portion, measuring about 6 feet to 9 feet in diameter across the top, was a confused mass of ask-blackened sand and clay similar to that filling the lower shaft, and was covered with a level floor of stiff boulder-clay, the surface of which was 2 feet 6 inches below the grass. On three sides the borders of the pit had a rough pitching of cobbles, which expanded on the east side into courtyard, 9 feet square, paved with small boulders, giving access to a large slab of sandstone set on end, sloping down to the edge of the pit (which rose vertically on this side), and forming a kind of shoot.

The back and sides of a small fireplace or rude melting-furnace, consisting of three slabs of sandstone set on edge, were in position on the original surface near the north-west corner of the pit. The fire-seat or enclosed area of the furnace was only 6 by 8 inches across, and its significance arises from the fact that lumps of iron slag were found beside and underneath two of the stones, and bits of charcoal, mineral coal, iron cinder, and corroded bronze on the floor level round about.

The following are the noteworthy contents of the pit :—

Gem.—Small onyx (a kind of agate) of lenticular shape and perfect proportions for ring setting, in two layers, pearl-grey above and brown beneath, the top layer cut in intaglio with a rude representation of a charging bull. Though the art is not of a high order, the design is finely polished on the inside, and though the upper surface of the stone is roughened by wear, the remainder is beautifully smooth and glistening. It was found in the confused filling at 3 feet 6 inches below ground level. (Plate I. Fig. 11.)

Coins.—A second bronze (dupondius) of Trajan, legend corroded and undecipherable, was found at 3 inches less depth.

At 11 feet from the north-east corner of the pit, and only 1 foot 3 inches below grass level, a silver denarius was obtained, which, though much worn, was identified by Mr. Charles H. Read, F.S.A., of the British Museum, as being of Mark Antony, struck just before the battle of Actium, 35 B.C.

Bronze.—The pointed end of a pin and quite a number of small corroded fragments, which coloured the surrounding soil and appeared to be sweepings or workshop waste.

Head of a broken fibula, harp-shaped, hinged, of flat-oval section, with chain-loop and silver-gilt, or composed of some greyish non-corrodible alloy; ornamented with deep grooves and sharp-edged collar-mouldings on the middle of the bow. (Plate I. Fig. 1.)

Iron.—Socketed iron hook, like the head of a shepherd's crook, 5 inches in total length, the bow of the hook $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter, and the socket 1 inch in diameter.

Lead.—A small rivet and several small strips and amorphous lumps of workshop waste.

Glass.—Fragment from the side of a globular vessel of purplish-tinted glass.

Several fragments of the greenish-tinted commoner kind of square bottles.

Pottery.—Among the usual number of fragments of coarse earthenware there was part of the rim of a mortarium, with the potter's name in worn and illegible characters.

Among a few of plain terra sigillata from near the bottom was part of the base of a patera, form 31 (Dragendorff), with the potter's stamp (PA)TRICI, and others of embossed bowls, form 37 (Dragendorff), viz. (a) part of bulge ornamented with figures framed in metopes and small medallions in the style of the second or third century, made at Lezoux, and stamped with the potter's name IVS(TVS) on a raised label in sunk letters reversed; (b) portion of rim with animals, unframed, of types 910 Dog running to right, and 960 Serpent in Dechelette's list (Les Vases Céramiques Ornés de La Gaule Romaine, vol. ii. pp. 138, 143), with the potter's name GERMA(NVS), (MA. ligulate), a potter at La Grau-fesenque, France, in the first century, whose productions have been found among the ruins of Pompeii, beneath the ashes of Vesuvius, which buried the city in A.D. 79; (c) part of brim with figures framed in semi-medallions of a later period; (d) part of base pierced with a hole which retains a leaden rivet used for mending.

Miscellaneous.—Several pieces of calcined clay from the inside lining of a furnace cavity having a surface actually melted into black glass and forming drops owing to the intense heat of the fire. (Such débris of furnaces has been frequently met with during the excavations.) Lump of clayband iron ore at 2 feet 6 inches down. Slag or iron scoriæ at 2 feet 9 inches down. Cubes of ordinary mineral coal at 2 feet 6 inches down. A lump of slag containing free bronze or copper in a corroded condition at 8 feet down.

Decomposed segments of lava guerns and teeth of ox and pig also much decomposed.

Refuse Pit (3).—A hole in the ground, covered with a layer of red-burnt sandy clay 3 inches to 4 inches thick and 3 feet to 4 feet square, was 3 feet 6 inches deep and 6 feet in diameter, and situated in the south-west angle of the fortified area, away from any structured remains, being come upon in driving one of the exploratory trenches.

The following are the noteworthy contents:—

Bronze.—Enamelled bow-shaped hinged fibula, without cross-bar, and with a chain-loop on the head; the flat surface of the bow, from the head to beyond the middle, decorated with three rows of rectangular chequers, pale green alternating with deep orange-red; the margins defined by neatly incised lines. The front of the bow has also a circular boss filled in (on the top) with faded scarlet enamel. The foot tapers in graceful curves to a terminal knob encircled by beaded cordons. Length $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches. (Plate I. Fig. 5.)

A fibula of similar design, ornamentation, and dimensions found on the surface of the ancient buried forest when bared by the sea at Great Meols, on the coast of the Wirral peninsula, is described and illustrated by Dr. A. Hume (Ancient Meols, Plate III. Fig. 5, p. 63).

An almost exactly similar one was also previously found at Wilderspool, and affords further evidence in support of the conclusion previously arrived at, after discovery of the remains of a bronze-founder's and enameller's workshop, that these and similar objects were manufactured in this locality.

Pottery.—Greyish-brown to black vessel of cinerary urn type (broken on one side only), $7\frac{7}{8}$ inches in height and $6\frac{3}{8}$ inches across the brim, having a polished shoulder and belt, $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide, of trellis-pattern ornament in light tooled lines round the bulge.

In addition to a few bits of plain terra sigillata dishes and cups, forms 31 and 33 (Dragendorff), there were the usual number of coarse unglazed fragments, one of which was of thin hard reddish-brown paste, decorated with vertical striæ produced with the roulette.

The Remains of a Dwelling or Workshop (9) were uncovered inside the north-west angle of the fortification where the main rampart and accompanying Via turn nearly at a right angle to follow in a north-easterly direction the line of the river bank. Here, unfortunately, a large slice of the Romano-British stratum, measuring at least 29 yards from east to west by 36 yards in the other direction, had been previously removed for the purpose of obtaining sand or providing a direct access to the field from the adjoining street (Greenall's Avenue or Old Chester Road), and in this way the north wall of the building, to be presently described, had also been eradicated. The remains in question formed part of the "Long Corridor House," briefly referred to in my report for the year 1900 (Transactions, vol. xvi. p. 16), and more fully described in my papers entitled Warrington's Roman Remains, recently published, page 11.

Their position can also be traced by reference to the plan of the settlement which appeared more recently in the Transactions, 1904, vol. xx. A line of walling, 2 feet 6 inches wide, consisting of a double row of squared facing stones filled in with rubble and consolidated with clay on a bedding of similar clay 2 inches thick and 3 feet wide, is laid down in the plan, and described as starting at 96 feet from the north fence of the field (along Greenall's Avenue), and extending 80 feet eastwards at right angles to the Via, but is shown without any return walls at its outer or eastern extremity, although prolonged search for them was then unsuccessfully made. On opening up the adjoining ground during the more recent excavations (1905) the clay bedding of the same line of walling was traced for a farther distance of 4 feet 6 inches, or a total distance of 84 feet 6 inches from the Via. At its extremity a similar bed of clay 2 feet 6 inches to 3 feet wide, extending northwards for a distance of 37 feet 6 inches from the end of the preceding, and having upon its surface patches of rubble foundation here and there, gave the line of the east wall of the enclosure previously sought in vain. The angle formed by the junction of these two lines of walling at the south-east corner of the enclosure is somewhat less than a right angle, since the north end of the latter was about 2 feet inside its true position as found by calculation, an irregularity not uncommon in buildings of the period and not perceptible to the naked eye.

The presumed north wall of the enclosure, and everything beyond it on that side, had, as above stated, been previously removed.

Similarly the rooting up of the stones for further use or in the course of agriculture was found to have rendered the remains of walling on the west side very sparse and indefinite, so that its line could in places only be recognised by reference to the limits of the clay floor covering two-thirds of the northern portion of the enclosed area.

At the floor-level of the southern portion there was a yellow, powdery layer of burnt sand, 2 or 3 inches thick, and about 10 feet wide from north to south. The remainder of the floor—a layer of well-puddled brown boulder-clay covering a space of about 24 feet square—was mostly about 3 inches thick, but increased in thickness to 3 feet beside the long reverberatory furnace which occupied the greater portion of its west side; it was found at varying levels, there being a depression along the same side to give access to the stoke-hole of the furnace.

The dimensions of the workshop or enclosure over all (including the thickness of the walls) was consequently at least 37 feet from north to south by 25 feet wide.

To ascertain the relation of these newly-discovered foundations to those previously traced at the south-west angle of the enclosure, a portion was again uncovered of the end of the line of walling mentioned in my preceding report (Transactions, 1900, vol. xvi. p. 16) as commencing at 21 feet from the Via and running nearly parallel to the long south wall (84 feet 6 inches in length) for a distance of 40 feet, and it was found that the long corridor or alley (7 feet wide at its eastern extremity) between the two walls was a passage leading from the Via to both the workshop and the smithy-furnace there situated, as shown upon the plan and accompanying photographic plate.

The character of the overwalling of these solid foundations can be inferred from the quantity of broken bricks of very dense consistency, blue on the inside and nearly 2½ inches thick, lying on the surface of the floor, which may have formed the material of dwarf walls; and from the number of iron nails, 2½ to 3 inches in length, and lumps of partly-burnt sandy clay, 2 to 3 inches thick, smooth on one side and on the other side marked by parallel grooves, half an inch deep, ¾ to 1 inch wide, and 2 or 3 inches apart, evidently the remains of "wattle and daub," which may have been the filling of a timber-frame superstructure or the lining of brick or stone walls—probably the former, as the fallen clay was in layers on both sides of the foundations of the east and south walls.

The absence of tiles and stone roofing-flags, of which fragments were so abundant on the floor-level of one or two other dwelling-houses on adjoining sites, is an indication that the roofing was composed of shingles or thatch, although it is difficult to understand how lead could have been employed along with the latter materials. That lead had been used for water spouting or for some other purpose in connection with the building was inferred from the masses of lead in a loose amorphous condition, mixed with sand, charcoal, and clay, just as it had run down when molten during a conflagration which destroyed the building, being likewise found along the edges of the south and east walls in several places.

Base of a Long Reverberatory Furnace (10).—The base of a clay furnace referred to as occupying a large portion of the west side of the floor was similar in construction to many others that have been described, viz. an oblong cavity with a stoke-hole sloping downwards from it in front and a narrow "working-door" giving access to it without withdrawing the fire from a corner of the rear, lined throughout with calcined clay of a light-buff colour, and surrounded by a platform of massive boulder-clay much reddened by heat all round the sides of the cavity. The sides of the stoke-hole were similarly supported by stone jambs coated with clay, and the usual semicircular hearth in front of the latter was likewise of calcined clay carefully laid on a layer of cobbles and set round with stone blocks.

The interior of this and all the other of these so-called reverberatory furnaces was filled with terra-cotta fragments and red burnt clay, the remains of an overarched covering which reflected the heat of the fire on to the surface of the material forming the charge, and thereby justifies the name. Possibly they were provided with an upright shaft of some description for the purpose of increasing the draught, but of which no trace has been observed.

Dimensions

Furnace Cavity.—Length, 4 feet 6 inches; width, from 1 foot 6 inches across the middle to 1 foot 10 inches across either end; depth, from 3 inches at the back of the stoke-hole, increasing with a slight batter in both directions to 10 inches at the mouth of the latter and to 6 inches at the rear of the furnace opposite the "working door." A basin-shaped depression, 7 inches in diameter and 3 inches deep at this spot, which may be termed the well, was possibly produced by wear. Working-Door or Flue.—Length, 1 foot; width, 6 inches to 8 inches, increasing outwards. Stoke-hole.—Length, 1 foot; width, 10 inches, increasing outwards to 1 foot. Hearth.—Width across the mouth of the furnace, 3 feet 6 inches, and in line with its longer axis, 3 feet to 3 feet 3 inches, being rather more than a semicircle in plan and slightly domed in the centre.

The following is a list of objects from the immediate vicinity of the enclosure, and recorded at the time as having been found between 1 foot 3 inches and 2 feet below the natural surface of the ground :—

Bronze.—Bow-shaped fibula, 2 inches in length, with cross-bar, and ornamented with three longitudinal grooves separated by sharp ridges (fluting) along the outside of the bow, which tapers gradually from head to foot. (Plate I. Fig. 3.)

Enamelled bronze brooch circular in shape, $1\frac{1}{4}$ inch in diameter, with hinged pin and bent catch-plate complete, but slightly damaged with the spade. The centre is conical and ornamented with a projecting knob on a cone, $\frac{5}{8}$ inch in diameter, set round with five discs and with a flat ring set round with fourteen discs, $\frac{1}{8}$ inch in diameter, in faded greenish champlevé enamel. Round the edge six small knobs project at equal distances, three above and three below, with two larger ones, $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in diameter, having incised rings and central dots by way of ornament on either side. (Plate I. Fig. 2.)

Bolt of lock slightly bent, $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches in length, $\frac{1}{2}$ inch wide and $\frac{1}{8}$ inch thick, having two slots, in the form of a St. Andrew's cross, for reception of the bits of the key. (Plate I. Fig. 6.)

One half of a pentagonal plate-hinge with iron pin and one rivet for fastening it to the door or lid. (Plate I. Fig. 7.)

Iron.—Cover-plate or casing, 8 inches by $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches, for the lower part of the blade of a wooden spade, with a large central rivet and two triangular side wings folded over for fastening it to the wood, a portion of which was retained in a decayed condition within the folds.

Square-headed door-staple, 1 inch side, with bolt-hole $\frac{1}{2}$ inch across, and spike $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches in length for driving into the wood.

Catch-plate or staple, $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches by $1\frac{3}{4}$ inch, with two spikes at right angles for driving into the wood.

T-clamp for fastening revetting tiles to a wall.

Many nails, 2 to 3 inches in length, of which about sixty were actually counted.

Cup in the shape of a spherical segment, diameter 3 inches, depth $1\frac{1}{4}$ inch.

Lead.—Several lumps, splashes, and scattered drops mixed with sand, clay, and charcoal, as they had fallen from the roof in a melted state during a conflagration, were found at the floor-level inside and outside the east and south walls.

Spindle-whorl, 1 inch in diameter, $\frac{1}{4}$ inch thick, $\frac{1}{4}$ inch bore.

Glass.—Small lump of greyish-blue frit or crude enamel; triangular fragment of flat window-glass, dull on one side.

Pottery.—The fragments of unglazed black and brick-red earthenware were exceptionally numerous, along with those of mortaria and light-buff amphoræ.

A small oval-bodied unglazed urn of cinerary type, dirty brown to black in colour, unornamented except by a slight groove round the outside edge of the base, $4\frac{1}{4}$ inches in height, $3\frac{3}{8}$ inches in diameter across the brim, and $2\frac{3}{8}$ inches across the base, was obtained whole beside the iron spade-cover at about 2 feet below the grass just outside the south wall.

Among the few fragments of terra sigillata was half of the base of a patera, form 31 (Dragendorff), with a portion of the potter's stamp (PAT) NAFE, a potter of Gaul, whose name has been met with previously at Wilderspool and at two other localities in Britain, viz. London and Cirencester.

Miscellaneous.—Bits of raddle or hæmatite ore; a large lump of iron slag on the surface of the floor and several smaller ones from an ash-blackened layer of soil which separated the upper floor from the scattered remains of what was apparently an earlier floor of less area underneath; fragments of cannel-coal and ordinary mineral coal from the same layer between the two floors, thus affording evidence of iron-working having been carried on in the two furnaces situated within the same enclosure, viz. the long reverberatory furnace and the smithy-hearth found in 1899 close at hand.

Several of the many pieces of charcoal found at the level of the upper floor retained the shape of the original wood, in the form of small rods about ½ inch in diameter, which may have been "wattles" from the burnt walls.

Segment of a quern or hand-mill of millstone grit.

Stone "sleeker" of triangular shape, 4 inches on each side by ½ inch thick, with edges and angles rounded by wear.

Refuse Pits (3–5).—The particular purpose for which the furnace was used was further evidenced by the contents of three refuse pits closely adjoining and partly underneath the floor, (3) and (4) along the north side, measuring 6 feet and 4 feet deep, and 3 feet 6 inches and 4 feet 6 inches wide respectively; and (5), near to its north-east angle, 5 feet deep and wide, viz. fifty-two iron nails, a few lumps of heavy iron slag, one of red raddle or hæmatite ore, many bits of charcoal, and two of ordinary mineral coal at depths of from 3 to 5 feet from the surface; a small lump or splash of lead; several large fragments of $2\frac{1}{4}$ inch thick, dense, heavy brick, and many fragments of common unglazed red and black earthenware. Of more artistic character were a portion of a terra sigillata bowl, form 37 (Dragendorff), with figures representing the Infant Hercules strangling the serpents, and Apollo seated holding a lyre (variants of types 464 and 52 in Dechelette's list), and a cruciform pattern in the style peculiar to the end of the first or beginning of the second century; eight portions of dishes or cups of the form 31 or 33 (Dragendorff), and part of the rim of a mortarium of coarse paste with the potter's stamp C ATTIV(S̄) MARIN(VS) in two lines reversed, a name recorded in my preceding report (Transactions, 1900, vol. xvi. p. 51).

A beautifully pure glittering crystalline glass bead, $\frac{1}{2}$ inch in diameter, splintered slightly upon the surface, but otherwise undecayed, and a few fragments of similar material are also worthy of particular mention, and were found at the bottom of pit (5).

A small flint implement ($\frac{7}{8}$ by $\frac{1}{2}$ by $\frac{1}{8}$ inch) beautifully worked with two edges and mid-rib; splinters of calcined bone and decayed teeth of ox and horse, and part of a quern of millstone grit found in the same pits should likewise be recorded.

Paved Courtyard (8).—Commencing at 4 feet north from the preceding, there was an oblong pavement, measuring 14 feet 6 inches from north to south by 8 feet, not in line with the wall of the next adjoining building from which its distance varied from 13 feet 6 inches on south to 15 feet 6 inches on north. The surface was pitched with large cobbles (small water-worn or ice-worn boulders of very hard stone), along with a patch of gravel and a few broken pieces of dense brick, and had a slight batter towards the east side. Fragments of Samian and coarse pottery, clay-daubing with the impress of wattles, iron slag, and charcoal lying upon it, displayed its Romano-British origin.

Smithy Furnace or Nailor's Forge (11).—At 14 feet still farther northwards, 22 feet from the north-east angle of the walled enclosure (9), and 111 feet from the north fence along Greenall's Avenue, this peculiar furnace was uncovered, which may be regarded as of unique construction. There are no regular curves or straight lines for its admeasurement or for the laying down of its plan, and equidistant ordinates had to be employed. In general terms it may be described as a panier-shaped fire-place (smithy-hearth or crucible) of clay, 2 feet deep, set up against the side of a hole in the ground, the hole being 8 feet in diameter, and 5 feet deep originally, excavated in the soft bed of sand. Half-way round one side the hole was lined with sandstone blocks to a height of from 2 to 3 feet, one of the largest stones being square and solidly bedded for supporting an anvil on the workman's left rear when facing the furnace. The other side was covered with a sloping wall of massive, well-puddled boulder-clay, 6 inches to a foot thick, the clay cover being continued across the bottom, where a flat stone was provided for the workmen to stand upon, and round the sloping margin of the pit in the form of a crescent, where its surface was calcined, to furnish a convenient platform for the hot ashes and heaps of charcoal or other fuel employed in the furnace. On the right-hand side of the platform there was a funnel-shaped depression with a gutter leading down to the interior of the fire-place, so that fuel could be easily raked into it, and an L-shaped strip of iron (width 1⅛ inch, thickness $\frac{3}{8}$ inch, length of long arm $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches, short arm $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches), which may have formed the head of the rake, was found in the hole. A convenient bench for a pair of bellows or for the tools of the workman, constructed also of clay, ran along the front of the gutter, sloping downwards and about 1 foot wide.

The fire-place had originally a semicircular front wall of clay 6 inches to 1 foot thick (increasing downwards), which was found in a collapsed condition and bent inwards against the back (but not broken), so that a square middle-section had to be cut away before the shape and dimensions of the interior could be determined. The section, 1 foot 3 inches deep, and from 1 foot 4 inches to 1 foot 9 inches wide (increasing upwards), can be plainly seen in the photograph.

The original inside dimensions were:—Depth 2 feet, length and breadth across the opening 2 feet 9 inches by 1 foot 3 inches, length and breadth of base 9 inches by 3 inches. A small hole, 2 inches in diameter on one side of the base, was evidently for drainage purposes.

A ledge 3 inches wide across the back of the opening at the level of the front wall furnished a rest for the end of the poker and tongs when out of use.

The whole construction resembled a funnel-shaped mediæval spout-head fastened against the wall of a house with a gutter leading down to it from a corner of the roof.

The usual buff-coloured interior lining of terra-cotta, which preserved the shape, gave evidence of the employment of intense heat.

Stepping Stones.—Leading northwards directly for the main Via a row of stepping stones, 1 foot 4 inches to 1 foot 9 inches wide, was traced for a distance of 16 feet, commencing at a large slab (2 feet

2 inches by 1 foot 9 inches by 6 inches) placed upon the edge of the pit evidently in position for the labourer to stand upon when discharging his burden of fuel or ore, which he probably carried in a basket upon his head. A branch line of similar stones struck off at right angles to the former at 6 feet from the pit. The fragments of an ornamented terra sigillata (Samian) bowl, form 37 (since restored and nearly complete), were collected on either side at the level of the base of the stones, a depth of about 1 foot 3 inches below the grass, the style of decoration and figured types indicating that the vessel was made at Lezoux in the second century by Cinnamus or Paternus, who were the principal exporters of that class of ware during the Antonine Period (A.D. 140–190). Here we have a modified example of the style of metopes, with figures occupying the whole width of the ornamented zone, separated by beaded fillets or spirally fluted columns supporting fantastic fantail foliage, four of the subordinate figures being framed in semicircular festoons of cable pattern. The figured types as numbered and described in Dechelette's list,[1] are :—

52 (variant).—Apollo nude, seated, his right hand raised to the top of his head, and left hand supporting the lyre which rests on his right knee.

146 (variant).—Perseus holding up the head of Medusa; a sword in his right hand and his left foot planted in advance.

220.—Female dancer, nude, holding a scarf.

338.—Man, nude, standing, his right hand extended; holding a pedum or similar object in his left.

523.—Man, bearded, standing, enveloped in a mantle which leaves his shoulders bare.

Figures of subordinate character are a diminutive

The objects derived from the hole in front of the furnace are the following:—

Coin.—Base denarius of Marcus Aurelius (A.D. 161–180), 2 feet below ground level (thus confirming the date assigned to the ornamental bowl). Though partly corroded the impression is quite fresh, and is unworn. Mr. C. H. Read, who identified it, suggests it to be a contemporary forgery.

Bronze.—Ornamental nail-head or stud, $\frac{13}{16}$ inch square, cast hollow with a double torus moulding. (Plate I. Fig 9.)

Tweezers (broken).

Iron.—More than five dozen nails of uniform size, 2 to 3 inches in length, unbent, and some well preserved by being embedded in clay.

Rake-head (above mentioned)?

Glass.—Fragment of greenish-blue square bottle, and one of flat window glass, dull on one side.

Pottery.—In addition to two or three of terra sigillata (Samian) and several of black and red earthenware, there were two necks of one-handled ampullæ of the ordinary type (globular bodied of pale buff unglazed paste).

Miscellaneous.—The surrounding soil was ash-blackened, and contained lumps of unspent charcoal and one small bit of ordinary mineral coal. Small cubes of similar coal were found at a depth of 2 feet 6 inches near to the second-century Samian bowl, but at 1 foot 3 inches greater depth. A lump of black glossy iron slag or cinder and cusps of teeth of horse and ox were also met with in uncovering the furnace.

The above list of objects, though not varied, is of sufficient significance to indicate unmistakably the purpose for which the furnace was employed, viz. iron-forging, and especially the manufacture of iron nails.

The few finds of which the particular locality is not recorded are:—

Bronze.—Hook (for retaining the handle of a situla?), with fastening-plate ($1\frac{1}{2}$ inch by $\frac{1}{2}$ inch). (Plate I. Fig. 10.)

Sheave of pulley for a window cord (?), length 2 inches, consisting of a double plate joined by a pin for the roller, and having a pierced fastening-plate at one end and a moulded ornamental knob at the other. (Plate I. Fig. 4.)

Iron.—Key with handle pierced for suspension, $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches in length, the web, $\frac{7}{8}$ inch in length, bent at a right angle.

Lead.—Loom-weight, 2 inches high, of square section with chamfered edges, tapering from $\frac{11}{16}$ inch across the base to $\frac{1}{2}$ inch across the top. The loop for its suspension originally provided at the summit has been broken across.

Glass.—Amorphous lump of common greenish-tinted waste material with tool marks and folded.

Piece of flat bluish-green bottle (?) to which a small bit of white unfused quartz adheres—probably a portion of a "waster" rejected on account of the flaw.

Miscellaneous.—Six handstones (pestles, sleekers, or rammers ?) for grinding in a mortar or smoothing or "pumming" clay moulds, resembling a number of others previously recorded and deposited in the Warrington Museum along with the other finds.

Hollow flint nodule of roughly ovoid shape, $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches in length by $1\frac{3}{4}$ inch in diameter, chipped off evenly at both ends of the hole to form a kind of bead or amulet for hanging round the neck on a string. This holed-stone was evidently regarded as a curio or charm, and, being a very rough one, was probably regarded with superstitious reverence rather than for its intrinsic beauty or worth.

(7) Head of pin in the form of a round boss encircled by a rim, hollow moulded.

(8) Handle of knife or butcher's steel in the shape of a dog's body issuing from a calyx of acanthus leaves, of which the iron blade is almost entirely corroded away.

(9) Stud composed of two thin discs united by a cross-bar; the lower plate plain; the upper plate enamelled on the surface with a delicate pattern, viz. a square of bright red joined on the four sides by the arms of an expanding Celtic cross in minute chequers of alternate white and bright green, with pure white in the intervening triangles.

(10) Fermail or flat circular brooch, enamelled on the surface; diameter, $\frac{3}{4}$ inch.

(11) and (12) Penannular ring brooches, one with pin nearly complete, the other broken and corroded.

(13) and (15) Rings of cast metal, one smoothed and polished, and the other retaining the fin or seam from the mould, showing it was cast upon the spot and not completed; diameters, 1 inch.

(16) Large-eyed needle, broken at the point.

(17) Harp-shaped fibula, with part of hinged pin and chain-loop on the outside of head.

SOME FURTHER NOTES ON STANDISH CHURCH AND ITS CHANTRIES

By Mrs. Arthur Cecil Tempest

Read 13th December 1906

THROUGH the kindness and courtesy of Henry N. W. Standish of Standish, Esq., who has permitted me to calendar his ancient deeds, I am enabled to add somewhat to Mr. W. F. Price's valuable article on Standish Parish Church in the last volume of our Journal.

By an undated indenture tripartite, to which Sir William Bradeshagh, William de Worthington, John de Cophull, William de Anderton, William del Burgh, John de Chisenhale, and Thomas de Adelington are witnesses, Henry, son of John le Waleys, chaplain, commencing by stating that, "whereas there is praise and glorious remuneration in the future for the souls of those who during life serve God with love and devotion with all their might, to the praise and honour of our Redeemer and the Blessed Virgin, His Mother,—know ye that I have ordained and constituted in the Church of Standish hereafter mentioned, a certain free Chantry to last forever, in the manner following, namely, that there be a certain chaplain resident and perpetual, who shall celebrate Divine service daily at the Altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary in the Parish Church of St. Wilfrid of Standissh, for the soul of the said Henry and the souls of his father and mother and his ancestors and all the faithful deceased. In such manner that on the death of one chaplain, another shall be appointed to do the aforesaid duties, and thus in succession, when and as often as any chaplain deputed to the said Chantry shall die or chance to vacate the same." He then proceeds to state that he will in his lifetime choose the chaplain, and that after his death Richard le Waleys and his heirs are to have the presentation, on condition that, within a month of the Chantry becoming void, the vacancy shall be filled and its lands and tenements handed over to the new chaplain. Should they fail to collate, then "John de Standissh" patron of Standish Church and his heirs shall have the right to present, but they are only given fifteen days in which to find the requisite priest; the Prior of Burscough and his successors are to have the presentation if the Standishes fail to appoint. The collators are enjoined to find "in the spirit of charity" a suitable and good chaplain, and to take nothing from him they may so appoint; so that he may with happy issues perform the above recited offices for the Chantry.

For the support and maintenance of the chaplain and his successors, Henry le Waleys gives two messuages and sixty acres of land with appurtenances in "Standissh and Longetre" in free, pure, and perpetual alms, quit and absolved from all services for ever. He seals with a man's head turned to the right, surrounded by Gothic tracery; issuing from his lips are two quatrefoils. The legend appears to read, VEIL : OI : (?) DE : FLOVR : DE : LAMOVR. (Standish Deeds, No. 38).

The licence to alienate the above messuages and lands in mortmain, for the support of the Chantry, was granted by letters patent dated at York, 12th February, 2 Edward III. (1327–8) to Henry, son of John le Waleys, chaplain, for which he paid forty shillings (ibid., No. 37, and Cal. Pat. Ro., 1327, 30, p. 236).

Amongst the Standish deeds are two which probably refer to Henry le Waleys's acquisition of the land with which he endowed his Chantry, viz. in July 1315, William, son of William Smith (Fabre), released to "Henry le Walsh," rector of the Church of Standish, all these lands, &c., in "Standissh and Longetre" which he had of "William my father," and in December 1316, Hugh de Standish released to "Henry, son of John le Waleys' chaplain" these lands and buildings to the west of Cimberbrok in the same vills, which had been the heritage of William Smith (Standish Deeds, Nos. 27 and 29).

In November 1332, Henry le Waleys, rector of Standish Church, further enriches the Chantry by delivering to Master Simon, son of Thomas le Waleys, chaplain, six oxen and four cows, worth a hundred shillings, as an increased provision to him and his successors, the chaplains of the Chantry of Blessed Mary the Virgin in Standish Church. Whereupon the said Simon swears, with his hand upon the Holy Gospels, that, on his death, he will deliver the same number of animals or their value to the chaplains, his successors, so that they may be passed on to the use of each successive priest who shall be in possession of the said vicarage; the successors are also to be bound by oath to pass on the cattle or their value. Simon undertakes for himself and his successors that every day after the death of the said Sir Henry, his memory shall be honoured in the celebration of the Mass, and in alms to the poor. The seal Henry le Waleys uses is the same as the former one (ibid., No. 45).

By March 1337–8 it is probable Richard le Waleys was dead, for at this date John de Standish and his heirs, the patrons of Standish Church, are appointed patrons of the Chantry by Henry le Waleys to the exclusion of Richard, and they are bound by the same provisions for avoiding the Chantry being left without a priest. William de Worthington, Thomas de Longetre, William de Anderton, William del Burgh, John and Roger de Chesenhale, and Henry de Ince being witnesses (ibid., No. 55).

In 1368 the Chantry priest appears to have been Adam de Kecwyk, for by an indenture in French, dated at Standish Friday after the Invention of the Cross (May 3), 41 Edw. III., it is recited that Adam de Kecwyk, chaplain, was bound to "Henry de Standissh," patron of Standish Church, in £20, to observe the following covenants: namely, that he shall follow the counsel of the said Henry as to his rights, debts, and arrears, "en chekune place par voy de les person costage ressounablement ordayne de les propres detts et asserages ou de son salary alowe par le det Henr en son consayl ordayn." Henry also decrees that the debts which can be legally recovered shall be put into the hands of two loyal men, to the profit of the said Adam and his successors (ibid., No. 89).

The 28th September 1394 (18 Ric. II.) Henry de Standish, patron of Standish Church, presented Thomas del Lee, chaplain at the Chantry, to celebrate before the Altar of Blessed Mary the Virgin, for the soul of Henry le Walsch, once rector of Standish, and all his benefactors, &c., and to hold the same for life. He further granted that Thomas shall hold the annuity of three marks in the parish of Standish, in aid of the said Chantry, and if the three marks are not paid within the parish, Thomas has licence to obtain the support elsewhere. The chaplain, on his part, agrees that all the grain grown by him, or in his name, on the piece of ground called "the Rydyng" shall be ground at Henry's water-mill in Standish (ibid., No.

111). This is probably the deed dated by Dr. West as 12 Ric. II., and so copied by Mr. Earwaker in his "Standish Charters," No. lxxviij.

By a deed dated at "Walsh Wittell," 18th November, 7 Henry vij. (1491), Sir Alexander Standish, Knt., reciting that Nicholas Bibby, chaplain, had lately enfeoffed him, along with Ralph Standish, his son, Thomas Radclif, clerk, Laurence Shotelworth, Henry Crichlaw, chaplains, Hugh Bretherton, Ralph Wodeward, and Roger Brimson of certain messuages and lands in "Walsch Withull" co. Lancaster, to hold as an addition and aid, for ever, to the Chantry belonging to the Altar of the Blessed Mary the Virgin in Standish Church, and that Sir Alexander and his heirs should, for ever, have the "aid and grant of the said messuages," &c., "as often as the service of the Chapel happens to be vacant," now demises the same to Nicholas Bibby, to hold for life to celebrate Divine service at the said Altar for the soul of Roger Standish, formerly rector of the said Church, and for the souls of the patrons and patronesses of the church, and for all the faithful deceased, every day of his life, and to find thirteen wax candles to be renewed yearly before the Altar of St. Wilfrid in Standish Church (ibid., No. 187).

It is probable that this endowment was a Standish one, and Nicholas Bibby merely acted as trustee, when he enfeoffed Sir Alexander &c. in the property. In August, 1478, Peter Standish (of Esley) appointed John Standish to deliver seisin of the messuages and lands in "Walshe Whitell" to Nicholas Bibby and John Greenhall, chaplains, of which he had enfeoffed them (ibid., No. 167).

With regard to the Chantry of St. Nicholas, the Standish deeds also afford some information. By an indenture, dated 1st August, 19 Edw. iv. (1479), it is recited that "Master Alexander Fair-clogh, parson of Standissh Church," having enfeoffed "Alexander Standissh, Esq., Rauf Standissh his son and heir apparent, Laurence Fairclogh, Esq., and Rauf his son and heir, Robert Chernok, Laurence Longtre Esqr., Thomas Dokesbury, Henry Shotilworth of Hackyng, Edward Fairclogh, Hugh Dokesbury, Richard Fairclogh, Geoffrew Fairclogh, Edmund Farynton clerks, Nicholas Bibby and John Grenehalgh preestes" of all his messuages and lands, &c., in the county of Lancaster, under condition, that if required, they should re-enfeoff him or "to whom hit plesez him," of all the said messuages &c. for his life. If no re-enfeoffment was made, then Master Alexander desired that "al ye yssues fermes and profits yat shall groo and come of ye saides messuages, landes and tenements and of every parcell of yem of clere over ye annual charges of yaim shalbe taken to ye fyndyng of a Chauntre perpetuall for a conable (suitable) prest to say masse daile at ye auter in ye Chapell of Saynt Nicholus in ye paroche chirche of Standissh for ye saules of ye saide Maistre Alex^{r}., Maister Thomas Fairclogh his brother, and for ye saules of his fader and modir, brethe and sister, and for al criston saules, and for ye saules of ye patrone and patrones of ye said Chirche." Alexander Fairclogh further stipulates, that if at any future time this number of feoffees living be reduced to four, they are at once to re-enfeoff the property to one or two persons in fee simple, that they may immediately make an estate to re-enfeoff fresh trustees of an equal number as now, namely, fifteen, and the feoffees are, if possible, to be chosen from amongst the heirs of himself and of Alexander Standish. Standish and his heirs were to have the presentation "and admission of ye said Chauntre and preests for evermore and as oft tymes hit falles void so yat ye saide Alexander Standissh and his heires present and admitte a preest to ye said Chauntre within xl days after hit happen to fall void." Should the Standishes fail to collate, the Fairclogh heirs were to have the nomination, and, failing them, the bishop of Coventry and Lichfield (ibid., No. 173).

In 1502, the number of trustees falling to four, the 4th September, 18 Hen. vij., Sir Alexander Standish Kn^t^., Ralph his son and heir, Ralph Fairclogh, and Henry Shotilworth of Hacking, enfeoff Thurstan Standish of "Gaytehurst" and Ralph Wodeward gents of all those lands &c., of which Master Alexander Fairclogh, once rector of Standish Church, had enfeoffed them, with others (since dead), by his deed of 1st August, 19 Edw. iv. (ibid., No. 192). The deed for re-enfeoffment is not now forthcoming.

These are the only Standish deeds now existing relating to the Chantries in Standish Church, and there are none in which that of the Holy Rood is mentioned, though, in the Inq. p.m. of Ralph Standish, Esq., taken at Wigan 9th June, 31 Henry viij. (1539), he was found to have died seised of the advowson of Standish Church, and of the advowson of the three chantries, or nominations to the three, in Standish Church (ibid., No. 226).

From Mr. Standish's charters we are able to supply the surname of the second rector on Mr. Price's list; for in 1289, "Jordan de Stanect" demised for twenty years to Matilda, the mother of Sir Robert de Haydok "rector of Staned" church, and to Nicholas "Hugonis," her husband, some land in Standish, near "le wall" of the church (ibid., No. 5).

The first mention of the advowson occurring in these charters, is in November 1318 (12 Edw. ij.), when Henry, son of John le Waleys, clerk, demises to William, son of Jordan de Standish, for life, the mediety of the manors of Standish and Longtree along with the advowson of Standish Church. On the death of William, the same was to pass to his son, John de Standish, and his heirs, and in failure, to the right heirs of the said William. The witnesses to this indenture are Richard le Waleys, Adam de Chernok, William de Worthinton, John de Croppul, Thoms de Longetre, Richard del Holt, and Hugh the clerk (ibid., No. 31). Mr. Earwaker gives this in his "Standish Charters," No. xv., but has printed Le Waleys's name as "Sewaley."

Gilbert de Standish first appears in the family deeds, as parson of Standish the 17th February, 32 Edw. iij. (1357–8), and in 1364, seals with a good armorial seal, bearing on a shield the arms—a saltire within a bordure ingrailed. There is nice tracery work around the shield, and the legend reads, "SIGILL : DNI : GILB : DE : STAND :" He was a witness the 24th February, 20 Ric. ij. (1396–7) (ibid., Nos. 71, 84–113).

Alexander de Standish, "parson of Standish Church," appears as trustee in several feoffments from 1406 (ibid., No. 119), but was dead before the 11th July 1428, when Laurence Standish, Esq., was his executor (Cal. Pat. Ro., 1422–29, p. 444).

The lease from "Master Thomas Radclyff, clerk," parson of Standish, quoted by Mr. Price, is dated the 15th May, 21 Henry vij. (1506), and recites that he demises to "Rauff Standyssh of Standyssh," son and heir of Sir Alexander Standish, Knt., "all that hys church and parsonage of Standyssh aforesaid with all manner of Glebe lands, meadows, lesez, and pastures, and all tythes, oblercons, frutes, comodytes, and emoluments to the same belonging" (woods and underwoods excepted) to hold from the feast of St. Mark the Evangelist now last past "for oon hole yere complet"; paying for the same, for the year, to John Abbot of Westminster or his successors, for the use and behofe of the same Master Thomas Radclyffe, fifty-pounds. Rauff and his executors and assigns are bound "at his proper costes and charges to fynd an able prest of good honest convercacon and of good lerninge to synge and saye dyvine service within the sede Churche of Standissh, and to mynystre the Sacraments and Sacramentals to the paryshens ther at all tymes necessarye and requysyte during the said hole yere." Mr. Standish was also to pay all ecclesiastical charges and subsidies, chargeable upon the rectory and church, and to repair "al buildyngs that now ys standyng and repayre the Chauncell of the said Church during the hole yere as nede shall require, at his costs and charges, except yf any fall downe contrary to his wyll or mynde." He is to have haybote and housebote from the rectory woods for such "reparacon and hegynge" as he shall do to the parsonage, but it is to be delivered to him by such person or persons as Richard, bishop of Winchester, shall appoint (Standish Deeds, No. 193). The 12th June, 7 Henry viij. (1576), Thomas Ratclyff gives another lease of the rectory, this time for twenty-one years, to "Robert Standyssh, chaplain, and Ralph Standissh, Esq.," the same provisions as to the spiritual supply, &c., being made (ibid., No. 199). This lease was wrongly dated by Dr. West in his "Abstracts," and consequently by Mr. Earwaker in No. ccxxxiij. On the "xvijth day of the moneth of Septembr, A.D. 1535, I Rauff Standissh, Squier, beyng in perfite and gude mynde and remembraunce, make my testament in maner and forme as followeth." After leaving his soul to God, &c., and desiring that his "body shalbe buried in Standissh Church yarde in such place ther as I shall appoynt hereafter," he continues, "And I giff and bewheth to the new makyng of the said Church xl^{li}" (ibid., No. 221). This will, I take to be identical with the one which Dr. West dates as the 18th October, 26 Henry viij. (1534), as the rest of the bequests are the same.

The twenty-one years lease of 1506 having expired, "Peter Bradshagh, clerk, parson of the paroch church of Standissh," on the 28th April, 30 Henry viij. (1538), demises to "Alexander Standissh, sqer., and Sir William Bymson, chaplain," the church, benefice, and parsonage of Standish, with all glebe lands, fruits, offerings, &c., belonging to the same, to hold from the feast of St. Martin in winter next to come, until the same feast in 1539, paying £45 for the term. Standish and Bimson agree with Peter, that he shall have and enjoy during the year at his pleasure, "the stockhay with the wood adjoining to the same; the beire croft and one acre of medow in the Berne medow, with all the holle Edeish of the said Berne medow, parcel of the said glebe lands," for which the rector was to pay them lxix*s.* viij*d.* Alexander and William on their part covenant to keep "all the housyngs and byldeyngs belongynge to the foresaid benefice and parsonage," as they "fynde them the day of thair entre ther at the sight of iiij endefferent persons chosen." They also agree that the Reverend Peter "shall have conveniente meite and drynke and lodgeyng for hym and his two servaunts and thair horsez at all tymes during the forsaid terme when he shall cume unto his said parsonage and benefice"; and they are also "to kepe hospitalite in the said parsonage duryng thesaid terme in the hous of God and to releve the pore people." This lease is signed by "Petrū Bradshagh, Rectore ecclie de Standyssh et Eccliston" (ibid., No. 223).

One cannot sufficiently regret that Dr. West's "Abstracts" should have been so meagre, and one fears not always correct, as a good many of the Standish charters which he saw in 1771 have now disappeared. The inaccuracy is doubly to be deplored, as Mr. Earwaker, in printing his "Standish Charters" from that MS., has unwittingly perpetuated the errors.

ADDENDUM

While the foregoing paper was being printed Mr. Henry Brierley of Wigan kindly forwarded to the Hon. Secretary a copy of an interesting document bearing on the history of Standish Church. This is here printed by the kind permission of the Rector of Standish. The transcript has been made with much care and exactness by Miss Fanny Wrigley, whose painstaking work is well known to all the members of the Lancashire Parish Register Society.

THE HERALDRY OF ORMSKIRK CHURCH

By James Bromley, J.P.

Read 15th February 1906.

HERALDRY has been styled "the shorthand of History," and though the phrase is to some extent true, it could more pertinently be called the shorthand of genealogy.

The heraldry of this church illustrates both truisms, for not only would it be impossible to identify most of its monuments without the heraldic charges, but from these can be gathered many historical facts hitherto unknown concerning both the monuments and the church.

From a comparison of these charges, and the particular adjuncts of different coats of arms, the approximate date of the dedication of the Derby Chapel can be fixed, and from them it is demonstrable that some of the monuments have been moved from their own particular chapel to another with which they have little relation, that the effigies have got ludicrously mixed up—a great-grandmother having been allotted as wife to her great-grandson—and that not only can the identity of nearly all the monuments of the church be clearly established, but also the relationship of many of the different people commemorated to each other, all of which demonstrates the special antiquarian importance of heraldic study.

There are, or were, in this church, I think, three examples of bogus heraldry, that is, arms for which no grants have been made, designed by unauthorised and sometimes ignorant persons, and about as many instances which raise interesting questions respecting the right of particular persons to display undoubtedly authentic heraldry belonging to other, though it may be allied, families, and at least one of these is particularly curious.

Though the salient genealogical dates are given from the monuments, it is not requisite to weary the reader with the fulsome eulogy of eighteenth-century epitaphs, for, like Lord Byron, it is not every one who "believes a woman or an epitaph."

The principal purpose of this paper is the elucidation of a drawing of the monuments of Ormskirk Church as they existed in 1664 during the Visitation of this county by Sir William Dugdale, Norroy King of Arms; but before dealing with this, which is confined to some now in the two chapels, it seems first desirable to describe the armorials that are outside those localities.

On the north wall of the tower is an oval monument to the memory of Henry Brooke of Astley Hall, Chorley, husband of Jane Brooke, donor of the old organ and £300, as an endowment for its upkeep, in 1731.

This monument is on a slab of blue slate, fast pulverising, which renders the charges a little dubious, though the colour and gilding are still bright. It is an impalement of Brooke: "Or, a cross engrailed per pale Gules and Sable" with the 2nd sign of cadency, and "Or, a double-headed eagle displayed Sable" (?), for Temple or Browne. Crest, "A brock passant proper." Henry Brooke died September 1718, aged forty-five. A similar heraldic display formerly adorned the front of the old organ.

On the west side of the south window of the tower is the marble monument of Christopher Sudell, A.M., Chaplain to James, Earl of Derby, Rector of North Meols and of Holy Trinity, Chester, and Prebendary of the Cathedral there. From this nearly all the colour has flown, but enough remains to identify it by. "Azure a cross (quarterly pierced Or) between four bezants, in honour point the 2nd sign of cadency." Crest, "A long cross, Or, the top encompassed with a wreath of laurel proper." Granted 1685. Christopher Sudell died August 3, 1735, aged sixty-two.

On the opposite side of this window is the marble monument of Charles Stanley of Cross Hall, Ormskirk, and Jane Sudell, his wife, daughter of the above Christopher Sudell: "Argent, on a bend Azure three bucks' heads cabossed Or," for Stanley, with an escutcheon of pretence for his mother, Elizabeth Parker, of the Isle of Man, "Argent, a chevron Azure guttée-de-sang, on a canton Gules an eagle's head erased Or" (?), with the Stanley crest, "On a chapeau Gules turned up Ermine an eagle, wings endorsed, Or, feeding on an infant in its nest, proper, swaddled, Azure, banded of the third." Charles Stanley died 19th of April 1754, aged thirty-nine, and Jane, his wife, 12th of December 1755, aged fifty.

On the east wall of the tower is a hatchment, a very conspicuous example of bogus heraldry. The whole ground of the hatchment and the field is Vert, and if the charges mean anything under the sun, it is possibly intended for an impalement of Pye with Glashan: "Vert, three fleurs-de-lys stalked and slipped Argent" (Or), for Pye, and "Vert, (Argent) a chevron Azure between three dirks Argent" (Azure, those in chief pointing downwards), for Glashan, but on this coat all the dirks point downwards, and, what is peculiarly fitting, on the apex of the chevron is "a fool's cap Or." Crest,

RUBBING FROM THE ENTWISTLE BRASS

"A bird close Argent." Motto, "Dea me judex," with an Esquire's helmet, and floral mantling.

In the south aisle is a brass, very interesting in many ways, especially to Liverpool people. Over a Latin inscription is an impalement, with floral mantling, "Argent, on a bend engrailed Sable three mullets of the field," for John Entwistle of Foxholes, Rochdale, obit 5th May 1710, and "Argent, on a bend engrailed Sable, three fleurs-de-lys of the field," for Dorothy Holt of Stubley, his wife, obit 30th September 1702.

Differences of opinion have arisen as to whether "the feast day of the holy Archangel Michael" referred to the then common belief in the fixture of the Resurrection Day, or to the time of Dorothy Entwistle's death, but I found from the Register that "migravit" refers to the latter.

This John Entwistle built a stone house in Aughton Street, Ormskirk, now the Brewers' Arms beerhouse, in which both he and his wife lived for many years and died, and were both buried intermurally at Ormskirk Church. In the gable is a carved panel with the date 1661, their initials, and the motto "Vivere in excelsis melius," which may be translated "To live in Heaven is better." Colonel

[1] See plate No. 1.

Fishwick informed me that this John Entwistle was the only inheritor of the Foxholes estate who permanently lived away from it, which may be accounted for by his position as Sessional Clerk, the Sessions for the West Derby Hundred being then held only at Ormskirk and Wigan. He entered his pedigree at the Visitation of Sir William Dugdale, at Ormskirk, on April 8, 1665, and he was for nearly fifty years Town Clerk and Recorder of Liverpool, at a salary of £525 per annum. On August 17, 1709, he sent in his resignation, dated from Ormskirk, wherein he suggests that "if you pitch on one of my family, it will be a great satisfaction to me." The Corporation took this gentle hint and elected as his successor his son Bertin, so called from a reputed ancestor of that name who was with Henry V. in France. There are many references to these Entwistles in the Liverpool Records.

On the south wall of the chancel, in a very obscure light, is a monument to the Reverend Archippus Kippax, Vicar of Ormskirk and Archdeacon of Man, whose name appears on one of the recast bells of the church, dated 1714. He died May 6, 1718, aged fifty-nine. On this monument is a coat of arms, seemingly "Argent, on a chevron Azure, between three holly branches fructed proper, as many wood-pigeons of the first, beaked and membered, Gules" (?), with a crest, "A badger passant proper" (?). There is no record of a grant of arms to the Kippax family, and these arms, if correctly deciphered, are those of Hollis of Rotherham, as is also the crest. Whether this Vicar was connected with the Hollis family I cannot find, but he had no right to display their arms.

On a monument in the south aisle, to Anne, relict of John Hawarden Fazakerley, Esq., obit 1800, is the crest of this family: "On a mount Vert, a swan, wings displayed Argent." This particular branch of the Fazakerley family long resided at Ormskirk, and there are other, but not armorial, monuments to its members in the church.

During a previous survey of the monuments of this church, some years since, I noted some armorials that are not there now.

In a stained glass window, an impalement—Stanley (as before), and Maitland, Earl of Lauderdale: "Or, a lion rampant dechaussé, within a double tressure, flory counterflory Gules," for Edward Stanley of Cross Hall, and Mary, eldest daughter of James Maitland, Earl of Lauderdale. Edward Stanley contested the Southern Division of Lancaster unsuccessfully in 1837, and died about 1860.

In a stained glass window in the north aisle was formerly a coat of arms: "Argent, a chevron Sable, in chief a lion passant guardant Or." Crest, on a wreath of the colours, "A nag's head, couped proper, caparisoned Or," intended for Welsby, but I cannot trace any arms for this family.

The Chapels

On the survey above alluded to I found, leaning against a wall in the Derby Chapel, a most interesting heraldic display. A hatchment; for Sir Edward Smith Stanley, 6th Baronet, and 12th Earl of Derby, impaling Elizabeth, daughter of James, 6th Duke of Hamilton, and 3rd Duke of Brandon, his first wife, and Eliza. Farren, the Liverpool actress, his second wife. In the centre Stanley, Quarterly 1 and 4 Stanley (as before) 2 and 3, grand quarters, 1 and 4. "Azure, three hedgehogs, Argent," for Herriz, and 2 and 3, "Gules, on a chevron Or, between three bezants, as many crosses pattée fitché, Sable," for Smith. On a canton Azure, the Ulster badge, the bloody hand, for the Baronetcy, and on an escutcheon of pretence, in the honour point, "Gules, three cinquefoils Argent," for Hamilton. The dexter impalement was: Quarterly, four grand-quarters, 1st and 4th "Gules, three cinquefoils pierced Ermine," for Hamilton. 2nd and 3rd "Argent, a ship with her sails furled, Sable," for Arran. 2nd and 3rd Quarterly, 1st "Azure, a lion rampant Argent, crowned, Or," for Galloway; 2nd "Or, a lion rampant Gules, debruised by a bendlet Sable," for Abernethy; 3rd "Argent, three piles Gules," for Wishart; 4th "Or, a fess chequy Azure and Argent surmounted by a bend Gules charged with three buckles of the first," for Stewart; over all, on an escutcheon, "Argent, a human heart Gules, imperially crowned proper; on a chief Azure, three mullets of the field," for Douglas; in the honour point, on a small escutcheon brochant-sur-tout, "Azure, three fleurs-de-lys Or," for Chatelherault, all these quarterings for Hamilton. The sinister impalement was: "Argent, a fess between three horse-shoes Azure," for Farren. The shield was ensigned with an earl's coronet, and on a wreath of the colours the Stanley crest (as before). Supporters, "Dexter, a griffin, sinister, a buck, both Or, and ducally collared and chained Azure, the buck attired of the last." Motto, "Sans changer." The impalement for Farren is very puzzling, as the proper coat of this Irish family is, "Gules, a saltire Or," and the exact blazon belongs to no known coat of arms, but, except in the tinctures of the horse-shoes, it is the same as that of Endesor, of Rollesby, Co. Norfolk, "Argent, a fess Azure, between three horse-shoes Sable."

The background of this hatchment was entirely black, indicating that all three were dead—Elizabeth Hamilton, died 14th March 1797; Eliza Farren, 23rd April 1829; and Edward Smith Stanley, the celebrated cock-fighter, 21st October 1834. This showed, he being the last survivor, that the hatchment was put up after his death, and in my own recollection it formerly hung on the south wall of the Derby Chapel until the "restoration" of the church. It is a great pity that such an interesting memorial of a former Liverpool actress should have been, as I am told it is, destroyed.

It will be seen from this description that the hatchment was remarkable in at least two points—the Farren charges, and the escutcheon of pretence for Hamilton, which indicated that the Earl claimed some honours through his first wife, though he had been divorced from her. From this wife comes the present Earl of Derby, and the only surviving daughter of Eliza Farren married Thomas, 2nd Earl of Wilton.

In the two existing chapels are some heraldic memorials that are not depicted on the drawing of Sir William Dugdale, though a few of these must have been in situ at the time it was made, and there are some more recently added, so it is perhaps more orderly to describe these before dealing with those on the drawing.

On the east wall of the Derby Chapel is a marble monument, Stanley (as before) impaling Warren, "Chequy, Or and Azure" (without the usual canton with a lion), floral mantling, Esquire's helmet. Crest, on a wreath of the colours, the Stanley crest (as before), for Alice Warren of Poynton, wife of the Hon. and Rev. John Stanley, who was successively Rector of Liverpool, Bury, Walton-on-the-Hill, and Winwick, where he died, aged ninety-one, in 1781. The inscription on this monument is remarkable for preserving an archaic style of nomenclature, of which a few examples can be found in the early Liverpool Directories. This lady was the daughter of Edward Warren of Poynton, by his second wife Margaret, daughter of "The Hon. William Spencer, Esqr.," and wife of "The Hon. and Rev. John Stanley, Esqr." She died in 1737, aged thirty-nine.

Of the four corbels which carry the roof of the Scarisbrick Chapel, one on each wall bears "a cross," probably meant as the common sign of Christianity, as the simple charge belongs to none of the Scarisbrick family alliances. One on the south wall has the Scarisbrick crest, "A dove, Sable, beaked and legged Gules, holding in the beak an olive branch proper," whilst one on the north wall has seemingly "A demi-lion rampant, crowned, holding a cross-crosslet in its dexter paw" (?). All these are high up and difficult to decipher, but probably the last is meant for "A demi-fox grasping a cross-crosslet fitchée Azure," the crest of Wrightington of Wrightington, from which estate the later Scarisbrick family came.

On the west wall of this chapel is a hatchment, Scarisbrick impaling ffarington, for Thomas Eccleston, who under his father's will assumed the name and arms of Scarisbrick, and his wife, Sybilla Georgiana ffarington. "Gules, three mullets in bend between two bendlets engrailed Argent," for Scarisbrick, and Quarterly, 1 and 4 "Argent, a chevron Gules between three leopards' faces Sable," for ffarington of Warden; 2 and 3 "Gules, three cinquefoils pierced, Argent," for ffarington of Farington. The black background of the husband's half shows that it was put up during the lifetime of his wife, about 1839, but its legend, "Resurgam," is a violation of an obsolete heraldic rule, thus humorously stated by that "satirical rogue," James Smith:—

> "Where'er a hatchment we discern
> (A truth before ne'er started)
> The motto makes us surely learn
> The sex of the departed.

If 'tis the husband sleeps, he deems Death's day a felix dies
Of unaccustomed quiet dreams,
  And cries 'In cœlo quies!'
But if the wife, she from the tomb
  Wounds Parthian-like post tergum,
Hints to her spouse his future doom,
  And threatening cries, 'Resurgam!'"

The carved memorial tablet, under this, bears an impalement of Scarisbrick (as before) and Messenger, "Argent, a chevron engrailed between three close helmets Sable," on a Chippendale escutcheon, and was erected by Anna Messenger to her husband, Robert Scarisbrick, who died, aged sixty-eight, 11th March 1737.

The two stained glass windows in the south wall of this chapel are commemorative of its "restoration" by Pugin in 1866, when they were dedicated to the memory of her father and mother by the Lady Anne Scarisbrick, widow of Sir T. W. Hunloke, Bart., of Wingerworth Hall, Co. Derby, who adopted the name of Scarisbrick on her accession to the estates. The heraldic charges in the upper lights of these windows show the successive changes in the nomenclature of her family and some of their alliances. The arms in both windows are alike, but in the east window the escutcheons are upright, and in the west window canted. (1) Scarisbrick (as before). (2) "Or, on a cross between four hinds' heads, Vert, two cross-crosslets fitchée, in pale, and two escallops in fess Or," for Dicconson. This coat is usually displayed, Quarterly 1 and 4 Dicconson, 2 and 3 Wrightington, and the cross-crosslets are evidently taken from the latter. (3) An impalement, Quarterly 1 and 4 Eccleston, "Argent, a cross Sable, in dexter chief a fleur-de-lys Gules," 2 Scarisbrick (as before), 3 Dicconson (as before), impaling "Sable, on a bend Argent three mullets, Gules," for Clifton of Lytham. (4) Eccleston (as before). It is singular that there are no ensigns for Sir T. W. Hunloke, the husband of Lady Scarisbrick, as it was through that marriage she attained the title of Lady.

The armorials of these windows are artistically treated, and the tinctures are mostly only suggestive of heraldic colour, whilst the "mullets" of the Clifton impalement are scarcely recognisable as such, and very different from the clear cut ones of the Scarisbrick coat.

On the crown of the arches of the King's Chancel, that is, the crossing between the transept chapels of Scarisbrick and Bickerstaffe, and so called because Henry VII. is said to have worshipped there during his month's visit to his stepfather, the 1st Earl of Derby, in 1495, are the Tudor badges. North wall, "The Portcullis, crowned," and "The fleur-de-lys." South wall, "The Lancaster Rose, crowned," and "A lion rampant, crowned," though the latter may be intended for the more distinctively Tudor badge, "The Red Dragon of Wales." This is the more likely, as they would then be exactly the same as those on the great bell of 1497, now in the belfry, but the insignia are too high up to make identification certain.

The Dugdale Drawing

The original of this unpublished drawing (plates 2, 3, and 4), is in the Heralds' College, but, through the kindness of Rouge Croix, I have a reproduction of it, from which these facsimiles have been made.

Sir William Dugdale, Norroy King of Arms, held his court at Ormskirk from the 22nd to the 24th of September, 1664, and this drawing was made in the church on the 23rd of that month, under his instructions, by Gregory King, Rouge Dragon

Pursuivant, a famous heraldic draughtsman, and verified by Dugdale himself, 8th April 1665, when he re-opened his court at Ormskirk and completed his visitation.

There are several errors in the identifications and in the drawings, and some omissions of blazon and heraldic adjuncts, which surround the monuments and now assist in their identification, but these will be noted in their proper place.

The monuments depicted at that time were in the three sepulchral chapels, which were not then benched, but, during the Churchwarden period, possibly for sanitary reasons, some of them were whitewashed, with the result that, though by this means the heraldry was preserved, some of the tinctures were altered, the blue turned green, the white vanished, and the red dulled; nevertheless, on the removal of this condiment there was a brilliant heraldic display, though the chemical cure proved worse than the disease, as under its action very few traces of the tinctures now remain.

The chapels, in which the monuments were, are not even named on the drawing, the distinction ala and muro with the points of the compass being the sole attempt at differentiation.

The Scarisbrick Chapel

It is clear from the wills of Thomas Scarisbrick (1530) and Gilbert Burscough (of Burscough Hall, Lathom, 1557), that this was the sepulchral chapel of the Scarisbrick family, and "Saynt Nicholas Chauncell, within the Parish Churche of Ormyskyrke," and I select from the drawing those monuments that belong to it.

Plate 3, No. 2.—These arms are, like most others on the drawing, without some adjuncts that must always have belonged to them, for it will be demonstrated that the draughtsman seized only on the essential heraldry and generally omitted the surroundings. They are enclosed by a sunk moulded panel high up in the centre of the south wall of the chapel, now much weathered, which, like three others in the Derby Chapel, subsequently described, are not monumental, but commemorative of the dedication of the chapels, though unlike these it carries no personal evidence of its donor, except that he was a Scarisbrick. It bears "Gules, three mullets in bend, between two bendlets engrailed Argent," on a wreath of the colours the Crest, "A dove Sable, beaked and legged Gules, holding in the beak an olive branch proper," for Scarisbrick, as shown, with Esquire's helmet and floral mantling, not shown.

Plate 3, Nos. 4 to 9, and Inscription above.—No trace of this alabaster tomb or its inscription can now be found in the church, though in 1664 it probably stood on the north side of the chapel, as the one shown below it occupied, as stated, the south side. It is, as the inscription shows, the monument of Elizabeth Scarisbrick, obit 12th December 1511. (4) "Azure, a lion rampant Ermine, crowned Or," for Gerard. (5) Scarisbrick (as before). (6) An impalement, Dexter (blank); sinister, Scarisbrick. (7) An impalement, Dexter, "Argent, a cross patonce Sable," for Banastre; sinister, Scarisbrick. (8) Scarisbrick. (9) Dexter, Banastre; sinister (blank), but none of these coats carry tincture marks. From the consecutive numbers on the monument below a superficial glance would lead to the supposition that Nos. 4 to 7 were at the back of it, and Nos. 8 and 9 at the feet, but it is clear that these belong to the monument of Elizabeth Scarisbrick, and the australi parte and the man's figure effectually differentiate the two monuments.

Plate 3, Nos. 10 to 15.—This pontomb, stated to be on the south side of the south aisle, must have been destroyed when the chapel was pewed, as the fine large brass shown on it was found on a slab under the floor of the pews, and at the "restoration" of the chapel was placed on a dark marble slab on the south wall between the windows, in a position where, from lack of light, it is impossible to properly appreciate its artistic merit.

The shields of arms under its head carry (10) Gerard (as No. 4), and (11) Scarisbrick (as No. 5), and at the side (12) "Argent, on a bend Azure, three bucks' heads cabossed Or," for Stanley. (13) "Argent, three chevrons Gules," for Banastre ancient. (14) Blank. (15) "Azure, three bars Argent," for Chaney [?], probably a coat brought in by Banastre. Those on the other side and at the feet are not shown, and as the pontomb is destroyed there is now no record of them. On the top of this pontomb is shown the brass, now on the south wall of the chapel, and Mr. Thorneley, in his book on "Lancashire Brasses," from the style of its plate armour and its mail shoes, dates the fashioning circa 1500. It bears no impalement or other distinctive mark of personality, and we merely know certainly that it represents a Scarisbrick; and, even when Dugdale saw it, the inscription and the sword hilt had been torn off. It bears some resemblance to the brass of Piers Gerard in Winwick Church, which is dated 1485, but the armour is simpler, indicating an earlier date. There is even now a project to erect a monument in this church to James, 7th Earl of Derby, who was executed more than two centuries and a half ago, and there are some monuments now in the Derby Chapel erected three-quarters of a century after the death of the persons they commemorate; so the argument of style is not very reliable, and seventy-five years before Mr. Thorneley's date would bring us to that of the most famous warrior and knight of the Scarisbrick race, Henry of that ilk, a hero of Agincourt, whom I am inclined to believe this brass commemorates.

When excavating Burscough Priory some years since, I found in the centre of the south wall of the south transept—the Scarisbrick Chapel—a partly recessed, partly projecting, canopied tomb (Transactions, vol. v., New Series, p. 143), on which this brass probably once lay, as even Mr. Thorneley's date is before the destruction of that monastery, and the pontomb shown on the drawing is evidently of later date than the brass depicted on it, which, with the three effigies subsequently described, were, there can be little doubt, removed from Burscough Priory at the dissolution.

Sir Henry Scarisbrick, Knight, died when the fame of this Priory was at its meridian; members of his family were donors to its endowments, and witnesses to twenty-eight of its charters, and their wills prove that they had a sepulchral chapel there. The prophetic speech which Shakespeare puts into the mouth of Henry V. shows that, even in the spacious days of Queen Elizabeth, there were many similar memorials of the King's knights then existing:—

> "A many of our bodies shall, no doubt,
> Find native graves; upon the which, I trust,
> Shall witness live in brass of this day's work."

It would occupy too much space to quote from the Records—principally the Norman and French Rolls—on which my identification is based, but briefly: I believe this brass is intended to commemorate the Henry Scarisbrick who married Katherine, daughter of Sir John Pilkington, Knight, and accompanied his father-in-law and brother-in-law to the French wars. The King summoned 500 Lancashire bowmen to assemble at Warrington, 5th July 1415, and on the muster-roll, before embarkation at Southampton, 11th August 1415, appears the name of "Henry Sharsbrock" with a retinue of two horse. He probably fought in the retinue of the King with the 219 Lancashire archers, who are recorded to have been included in the monarch's bodyguard at Agincourt, and was knighted on the field, as his name appears on the muster-roll after the battle as "Monsr. Henry de Sharesbreke, Chivr." with three Esquires, 25th October 1415. He returned home with the King, 17th November 1415, and there are several Records showing he remained there till 1419, when the men of "Henry Scarisbrek, Knight," were arrayed for the siege of Pontoise, and again, 6th May 1420, "Henry Skaresbrek, Knight," and his men were at the siege of Sens, probably having, in the meantime, witnessed the marriage of "Catherine the Fair," the daughter of the King of France, to Henry V. It is extremely likely that the Knight died, or was killed, during the siege of Sens, for, 16th July 1420, a writ was issued after the death of "Syr Henry de Scaresbrek, Chr."

At Agincourt the King wore a surcoat, like that shown on the brass, but with the quartered arms of England and France emblazoned on it.

The surcoat of Sir Henry Scarisbrick bears on the body the arms of a Scarisbrick, which are repeated on both shoulders of the cape.

The Bickerstaffe Chapel

This, the richest endowed chantry in the church, is now entirely dismantled, but in the sixteenth century it occupied the whole of the north transept, and was "The Chauntrie at the alter of o'r Ladie of Petie w'thin the said Churche of the ffoundacon of Thomas Athertone of Bikerstath."

Plate 2, Nos. 1 to 16.—These escutcheons surround two pontombs, now in the Derby Chapel, but it is quite clear from Dugdale's superscription that in 1664 they were in the north transept—the now destroyed Bickerstaffe Chapel on the other side of the church—indeed, without it, the charges prove them to belong to the Bickerstaffe family.

Of the one next the chancel, which is the memorial of James Scarisbrick and Margaret Atherton of Bickerstaffe, his wife, Dugdale shows the whole of the twelve escutcheons, though on the one next it on the south, which is the monument of Peter Stanley of Hooton and Elizabeth Scarisbrick, his wife, he only shows four escutcheons, whilst the charges on six can even now be traced. He has, too, made the curious mistake of transposing Ad pedes and Ad caput, for those charges that he shows at the head are really at the feet, and vice versâ, and he has misread three charges, misplaced another, and left several un-named.

These pontombs are of the same height, and exactly alike in detail, whilst some of the Stanley quarterings shown on both could, strictly speaking, not be displayed by any of the parties commemorated. These facts tend to show that both were constructed at the same time by Margaret Stanley of Bickerstaffe and her husband, Henry Stanley of Cross Hall, who were entitled to all the charges displayed, to her parents and grandparents. On the top of the Scarisbrick pontomb are the matrices for the brasses of husband and wife, with those for a shield of arms at the head and feet of each, and centred under their feet is that for the child heiress, whilst around the rim is that for the inscription; and though all the brasses are now missing, the following extract from the undated

FACSIMILE OF SIR WILLIAM DUGDALE'S DRAWING, 1664

Towneley MSS. gives a portion of the inscription: "In ye Church of Ormschirche in ye Co. Lancaster, on a tombe—'Of Charity pray for ye soules of James Scarisbricke, of Bickerstaffe, Esquier, and Margarett, his wife, and Elizabeth, their daughter, the w'ch Margerett deceased ye 18 daye of Jan., in ye yeare of our Lord God 1517, and ye same James dec'ed ye — day of —— in ye yeare of our ——.' On ye tombe ther is ye portraitures of a man and a woman in brass; he hath graven by him ye coates of Scarisbrick differenced with a crescent. The woman ye coate of Bicarstaffe and Atherton without difference. Another [coat?] showing Atherton to have been ye Lord of Bicarstaffe." The matrices for the brasses on the Stanley pontomb are exactly alike, except that there is no matrice for the heiress, who was not dead when they were erected, circa 1595.

In describing the charges on these pontombs, plate 2, Nos. 1 to 16, I shall follow the actual ascertained blazon, and call attention to the few Dugdale mistakes while so doing.

The charges on the escutcheons of the Scarisbrick pontomb (Nos. 5 to 16) are as follows: Plate 2, No. 12—Under the head of the man, Scarisbrick (as before), with a crescent cadence, for the second son. Under that of the woman, No. 11, Quarterly, 1 and 4, Scarisbrick; 2, "Gules, three hawks close Argent, beaked, belled, and legged Or," for Atherton; 3, "Argent, on a cross patonce Sable, five mullets Or," for Bickerstaffe. Under the feet of the man, No. 10, Scarisbrick. Under those of the woman, No. 9, "Vert, a lion rampant Ermine, crowned Or," for Gerard of Gerard Hall, Aughton. Those under the head and feet are reversed by Dugdale, and the Gerard charge is now beyond recognition. On the south side of this pontomb are: No. 5, Quarterly, 1 and 4, "Argent, three dragons' heads, erased, fire issuant from their mouths proper," for Halsall of Halsall, and 2 and 3, "Argent, two bars Azure," for Venables [?]. No. 6, Quarterly, 1 and 4, "Argent, on a bend Azure, three bucks' heads, cabossed Or," for Stanley; 2, Scarisbrick; 3, Bickerstaffe (both as before). No. 7, Quarterly, 1 and 4, grand-quarters; 1 and 4, Stanley (as before); 2, "Or, on a chief dancettee Azure, three plates," for Lathom; 3, "Chequy, Or and Azure," for Warren; 2 and 3, "Gules, three legs conjoined in fess-point, in armour Argent, garnished and spurred Or," for the Isle of Man. No. 8, Quarterly (all exactly as No. 6). On the north side are: No. 13, Quarterly, 1 and 4, Scarisbrick; 2, Atherton; 3, Bickerstaffe (all as before). Dugdale repeats Atherton instead of this last. No. 14, an impalement, Dexter, Scarisbrick; sinister, Gerard (both as before). No. 15, Quarterly, 1 and 4, "Argent, two chevronels between three oak-leaves Vert," for Mossoke of Mossoke Hall, Bickerstaffe [?] 2 and 3, Scarisbrick. No. 16, Scarisbrick.

On these it may be remarked that the 2nd and 3rd quarters of No. 5 are probably got through a Banastre marriage, as one of that family married a Venables. On the drawing the Scarisbrick sign of cadency is missing from No. 13, from the 4th quarter of No. 11, and from the 3rd of No. 15. The tincture of the field on No. 9 and on the sinister impalement of No. 14—Vert instead of Azure—is probably to distinguish Gerard of Gerard Hall, Aughton, from the parent house of Brynn, as there is no record of a field Vert with these arms. Nos. 14 and 15 are now entirely new and without any charges, and the 1st and 4th quarters of No. 15 are almost certainly meant to record a marriage of a Mossoke; indeed, I have two deeds, dated 1515, which record such a marriage, and a sale to a Myles Gerard of Gerard Hall, though there is no record of any grant of arms to a Mossoke, and these charges really belong to Huckley. But these three families lived within a stone's-throw from each other, and no doubt in those non-locomotive days frequently intermarried. In Dugdale's identifications below, he could not make out No. 5. On Nos. 6, 8, and 11 he mistakes Bickerstaffe for Rigby, though no one conversant with the genealogy of the family could do that. He fails to identify the 1st and 4th quarters of No. 15 and the Stanley quarterings.

Of the escutcheons on the other pontomb of Peter Stanley of Hooton and Elizabeth Scarisbrick, Dugdale only shows the four on the south side. This pontomb adjoins on the south side the one above described, and there can still be indistinctly traced an escutcheon under the heads of both husband and wife, not shown on the drawing. That under the head of the man is—Quarterly, 1 and 4, grand-quarters; 1 and 4, Stanley; 2, Lathom; 3, Warren; 2 and 3, Man (all as before), with an escutcheon of pretence, "Azure, a lion rampant Argent," for Montalt; and under the head of the woman—Quarterly, 1, Scarisbrick; 2 and 3, Bickerstaffe; 4, Atherton (all as before), but the 1st quarter is very indistinct. Of the four escutcheons shown in the drawing No. 1 is Quarterly, 1 and 4, Atherton; 2 and 3, Bickerstaffe (all as before). No. 2, Quarterly, 1 and 4, grand-quarters; 1 and 4, Stanley; 2, Lathom; 3, Warren; 2 and 3, Man, with the escutcheon of pretence for Montalt (all as before). No. 3, Quarterly, 1 and 4, Atherton; 2 and 3, Bickerstaffe (all as before). No. 4, Quarterly, 1 and 4, grand-quarters; 1 and 4, Stanley; 2, Lathom; 3, Warren; 2 and 3, Man, with the escutcheon of pretence for Montalt (all as before). The end under the feet is a plain slab, and the four escutcheons on the north side are quite new and without any heraldry. There is an incision on the east wall of the Bickerstaffe Chapel, the exact length of this pontomb, which proves that the present north side of it was let into this wall, whilst Dugdale's superscription shows that the other pontomb stood in medio predicti Chori. The Bickerstaffe cross on Nos. 2 and 3 has not the five mullets shown on Nos. 6, 8, and 11, and the escutcheon of pretence for Montalt on Nos. 2 and 4 is not shown on No. 7 of the other pontomb. All these are, no doubt, oversights, as there can be little doubt that all were meant to be alike.

These two pontombs furnish a perfect display of the maternal ancestry of the present Earl of Derby, and of the evolution of the Bickerstaffe estates from the original Bickerstaffes, through the Athertons, Scarisbricks, Stanleys of Hooton and Cross Hall to the Derby family.

The Derby Chapel

This chapel covers the much smaller area of what was called, until 1572, "The Chauntrie at the alter of o'r Ladye," or The Lady Chapel, which was endowed 29th September and 21st December 1366, by subscriptions in the church; the names of the 476 subscribers forming the earliest directory of the district.

The will of the 3rd Earl of Derby ordered "the erecting and bylding of one Chappell, and one Monumente and Towmbe at Ormschurtche." His body lay at Lathom House for six weeks in 1572, whilst the burial vault alone was constructed, but the chapel itself was not finished and dedicated, as its heraldry shows, until circa 1575.

Plate 3, Nos. 1 and 3.—These two monuments, and another, almost a replica of No. 3, and probably for that reason not shown on the drawing, are enclosed in panels, No. 3 being oval, and the other two square, and all the three are commemorative of the dedication of this sepulchral chapel, and are not monumental. No. 1 is on the south wall, and the two others on the north wall of the chapel, and Dugdale has omitted the adjuncts of them all, which largely aid their identification, whilst the whole of the charges are now much worn.

Plate 3, No. 1.—On the south wall is Quarterly, 1 and 4, "Gules, a cross potent crossed next the centre Or," for Chaderton; 2 and 3, "Argent, a chevron Gules, between three fleams Or," for Chetham, in chief the second sign of cadency, floral mantling, and Esquire's vizor (these three are omitted on the drawing) with, on a wreath of the colours, the Crest, "A demi-griffin, segreant Gules" [charged with the second sign of cadency], for William Chaderton, D.D., Archdeacon of Richmond, Yorks.

No. 3, on the north wall, is an achievement of eight quarters: 1, Stanley; 2, Lathom; 3, Man; 4, Warren (all as before); 5, "Gules, two lions passant guardant Argent," for Strange; 6, "Argent, a fess and canton Gules," for Woodvile; 7, "Or, a cross engrailed Sable," for Mohun; 8, "Azure, a lion rampant Argent," for Montalt; with over all, in honour point, an escutcheon of pretence. Quarterly, 1 and 4, "Chequy, Or and Azure, a fess Gules," for Clifford; 2 and 3 "(Barry of ten, Argent and Gules), a lion rampant Or (ducally crowned of the second)," for Brandon, encircled by the ribbon, motto, and mantle of the Garter. Supporters: "Dexter, a griffin; sinister, a buck, both Or, ducally collared and chained Azure, the buck attired of the last." Motto: "Sans changer." On an Earl's vizor (none of these adjuncts are shown on the drawing), an Earl's coronet, and the Crest,

"On a chapeau Gules, turned up Ermine, an eagle, wings endorsed Or, feeding on an infant in its nest proper, swaddled Azure, banded of the third," for Henry Stanley, 4th Earl of Derby.

The achievement next this on the north wall (not on the drawing) is exactly the same, except in its surroundings, which are—Supporters: "Dexter, a monkey; sinister, a wyvern, wings endorsed proper, both ducally chained and collared Or," with floral mantling, and on a Knight's vizor the Crest, "Two hands clasped, couped at the wrists proper," for Ferdinando Stanley, Lord Strange, afterwards, for seven months, 5th Earl of Derby. The distinctive escutcheon of pretence, on both these, is for Margaret, daughter and heiress of Henry Clifford, 2nd Earl of Cumberland, wife of Lord Derby, and mother of Lord Strange, and the differentiation between the two achievements is in the crests, supporters, vizors, coronet, and garter adjuncts.

The Earl, his son, and Dr. Chaderton were Queen Elizabeth's principal agents in Lancashire for hunting recusants of all types, and the approximate date of the dedication of this chapel is got by a comparison of these three panels. From them it is plain that the father of Lord Strange was alive when they were erected, and that he was then a Knight of the Garter, with the insignia of which he was invested, 20th May 1574, and that Dr. Chaderton was not then created Bishop of Chester, as there is no mitre above, or impalement on his arms for the See. He was promoted to this bishopric 9th November 1579, therefore the consecration of this chapel must have been celebrated in the five years between these dates.

The barry and crown on the lion of Brandon are not shown on the drawing, and are now too much worn to be distinctly recognisable, but the sign of cadency is now on the Chaderton panel, though not shown by Dugdale.

Plate 4, No. 16.—These arms: "Sable, a fess Ermine, between three cinquefoils Argent," for Edward Potter, have not been in the church for many years, and I have been unable to trace him or account for his burial in the Derby Chapel, though Dugdale's superscription "high up on the east wall of the south aisle" would be that of the Derby Chapel.

The Effigies

In figure-drawing Rouge Dragon is not up to his usual high standard, for the heads of all these are poorly drawn.

Plate 4, Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4.—Of these effigies Nos. 1, 2, and 3 are coeval in date, ruder and more worn than No. 4. The men, as shown by the armorials, are of the Stanley race, both wear a collar of SS, a surcoat charged with the Stanley quarterings, and are in armour.

The charges on the shoulders of No. 4, are Quarterly, 1 and 4, grand-quarters; 1 and 4, Stanley; 2, Warren; 3, Lathom; 2 and 3, Man (all as before), but on the skirt they are displayed as an impalement—Dexter, Man; sinister, Quarterly, 1 and 4, Stanley; 2, Warren; 3, Lathom, which latter arrangement is repeated on the waist. On No. 1 there is no Warren charge, and the others are differently arranged. On the shoulders, Quarterly, 1 and 4, Lathom, impaling Stanley; 2 and 3, Man. On the skirt and the waist, an impalement; dexter, Man; sinister, Quarterly, 1 and 4, Stanley; 2 and 3, Lathom, though most of the charges on both the figures are now difficult to trace.

The ladies, Nos. 2 and 3, carry no armorials and are dressed practically alike; both wear necklets (though only that of No. 2 is shown on the drawing), but No. 3 alone wears a coronet.

The legs of both the men, and the hounds under them, and the arms of both the ladies are now missing, and the bodies of both the latter are cracked, but it is clear that this mutilation cannot be truthfully attributed to the Roundheads, as the effigies are shown entire in 1664. They are:—

No. 1. Thomas Stanley, 1st Earl of Derby.
No. 2. His first wife, Eleanor, daughter of Richard Neville, Earl of Salisbury.

(Nos. 1 and 2 now lie together adjoining the south wall of the Derby Chapel.)

No. 3. His second wife, Margaret, daughter and heiress of John Beaufort, Duke of Somerset, and mother of King Henry VII.

(All these three effigies were erected in Burscough Priory.)

No. 4. Edward Stanley, 3rd Earl of Derby (the 1st Earl buried at Ormskirk).

(Nos. 3 and 4 now lie together adjoining the north wall of the Derby Chapel.)

The points for identification and differentiation are:—

(1) The only early Earls of Derby who by will ordered effigies of themselves to be executed are the 1st and 3rd Earls.

(2) The 1st Earl ordered his body to be buried in the midst of his chapel in the north aisle of Burscough Priory, and "personages" of himself and both his wives to be erected there.

(3) The 3rd Earl ordered his funeral in a new chapel to be erected at Ormskirk, and a monument for himself alone.

(4) The 2nd Earl (who was buried at the Monastery of Sion, Middlesex) was the first who quartered Warren, and transmitted it to his son the 3rd Earl, so this charge appears on his effigy, and not on that of the 1st Earl.[1]

(5) The 1st and the 3rd Earls were K.G.'s, whilst the 2nd was not. The 1st Earl died 1504, and the 3rd 1572, which accounts for the last being the fresher monument.

(8) Dugdale, at the bottom of the drawing, states (a statement repeated in Harleian MSS. and by other authorities) that he was informed that the four images drawn above were brought to Ormskirk Church when Burscough Priory was destroyed, but though he is wrong in including No. 4, the four would be made up by including the Scarisbrick brass shown on plate 3.

[1] THE WARREN QUARTER.—Elizabeth Goushill, mother of the 1st Earl of Derby, shared this honour with her maternal aunts and co-heiresses (the Fitz-Alans), who carried it into the families of Howard, Earl of Norfolk, and Neville, Earl of Salisbury, and probably, either survivorship or the danger involved in claiming to share any honours with the all-powerful family of the 1st Earl of Derby's first wife and her brother, Richard Neville, "the king-maker," delayed its use as a quarter by the Stanley family.

On very questionable authority the 1st Earl of Derby is stated to have quartered it, but the first really reliable record of its adoption is in a Parliament Roll of 1512, when it was quartered by the 2nd Earl, and the difference in the armorials on these effigies accentuates the latter enrolment.

[2] By reversal of attainder 1st of Henry VII., 1485.

arch separating the Stanley Chantry and Mortuary at Burscough Priory, on which these effigies (Nos. 1, 2, and 3), probably once lay.

The present arrangement of these effigies is remarkable, as to the 1st Earl is allotted his first wife, whilst his second wife (the mother of King Henry VII.), now poses as the wife of her step-great-grandson, the 3rd Earl.

Dugdale's identifications on plate 4 relate (with the exception of the last) to the armorials on plate 3, but he omits Chaderton, Gerard, Chaney, and Banastre (except No. 13, which he attributes to Langton, who afterwards adopted it), and all the Stanley quarterings.

It is worth recording that before the Stanley vault was sealed up I, when a boy, went down into it and noted that the body of James, 7th Earl of Derby, was in one coffin and his head in another, the ends of both fitting each other at a reverse angle of 45°, indicating that at which the neck had been severed when he was executed in 1651.

I began this paper with the expressed intention of describing the heraldry of Ormskirk Church, and identifying its monuments as a practical example of the uses of heraldic study, and I hope it may stimulate others to apply the technicalities of the science to similar purposes.

LIVERPOOL WARE PUNCH BOWL, 1780. (Exterior.)

LIVERPOOL WARE PUNCH BOWL, 1780. (Interior.)

AN OLD LIVERPOOL CAPTAIN AND HIS SHIP

By A. H. Arkle

Read 15th December 1906

SOME years ago I became the possessor of an old Liverpool punch bowl, which will, I think, serve as a peg on which to hang some interesting reminiscences of early Liverpool.

The bowl is, as you will see, one of the typical Liverpool manufacture—that is, with a crude representation of a very old-fashioned-looking vessel, coloured, on the inside, with an inscription as follows: "Success to the Hero, Capt. Daniel Wilcox, 1780." On the outside are various scenes of a maritime character in Sadler's printing.

The late owner, a gentleman then living, I think, at Waterloo, had had it for some years, and pasted a note on the bottom outside, showing that he had verified for himself the facts, viz. that there really had been a vessel called the Hero, commanded by Captain Wilcox, and that she did sail from Liverpool for Africa in March 1780, the very year of the presentation of the article to the Captain.

I have been able to discover some further particulars both of the ship and her Captain, which may prove somewhat interesting to those—and there must be many such—who like to learn everything they can connected with old Liverpool.

First, as regards the ship. I have made inquiries from Lloyd's Registry Office, London, and they were able to inform me that the Society's Records show that the ship Hero, Captain D. Wilcox, was of 400 tons, built in France in 1775, and that her owner in 1780 was a Mr. S. Shaw. They were not able to say the port of registry nor the owner's address, but there is little doubt the S. Shaw was the firm of S. Shaw & Co., at that time carrying on business in Liverpool. It appears to me quite possible that this S. Shaw may have been the founder of the eminent firm of potters. Picton tells us that the firm was founded early in the eighteenth century, and that Samuel Shaw died in 1775; the name may quite well have been retained for some years after his death.

From the fact of the Hero being built in France, I think we may conclude that she was originally a French privateer captured by the British and turned into an English one. She carried sixteen guns. All that we know of her history afterwards is told us by Mr. Gower Williams in his "History of the Privateers," from which I take the following paragraph (pp. 266, 267):—

"Early in 1780 the Hero, Captain Wilcox, bound for Guinea, was taken by the French and retaken within a league of Cherbourg by H.M.S. Champion. On the 1st May the Hero was again taken sixteen leagues south of Cork by a French privateer, and again retaken from the enemy. Once more the Hero essayed to reach Africa, only to fall a prey to the combined fleets of France and Spain, who sent her to Cadiz." I can find no further record of the vessel.

The Captain's name first appears as the master of the vessel Liverpool, owned by the same firm, being mentioned in Appendix IV. of the "History of Privateers" already referred to, this appendix being a list of the privateers engaged during the years 1775 to 1783.

Captain Wilcox, after the loss of his ship, evidently reached home safely; at least his name appears in the Directory of 1781 as living at 40 Hurst Street, off Mersey Street, and he did what many of his calling were not able to do, especially at this stormy time in our history, namely, died in his bed. In the records, preserved by the Corporation, of the gravestones removed from St. Peter's Churchyard, when it was a few years ago converted into a garden, there are the following inscriptions of the Captain and his wife, who long survived him:—

"Here lieth the body of Captain Daniel Wilcox, who departed this life 4th June 1789, in ye 59th year of his age. Also, here lieth the body of Mary, the wife of Captain Daniel Wilcox, who departed this life 5th Jan. 1802, aged 59 years. Universally lamented by all her friends and acquaintances, she bore her afflictions with the greatest fortitude; she was an affectionate wife, a tender mother, a dutiful child. Charitable to the distressed and a sincere friend."

They are in the same grave as John Button and his wife.

Captain Wilcox's will was registered at Chester on the 9th June 1789 by his widow, John Swainston, and —— Brockelbank.

Here I should like to tell a story about the Captain which has only recently reached me from a descendant which throws some light upon the slave trade.

On one of his voyages the Captain jumped overboard and saved the life of one of the slaves who had fallen into the sea. The man showed such gratitude that he was made the Captain's personal attendant, and always waited on his master. On one occasion, when on a voyage from the West Coast of Africa to America, the Captain and his officers, including the doctor, were at dinner, when the negro servant dropped something behind his master, and, as he stooped to pick it up, he whispered, "Massa! no drink. Massa! no drink." At first Captain Wilcox could not understand what the man meant, but he took no apparent notice of the warning, for he realised that such was what the slave intended, but he closely watched every movement of the slave during the rest of the meal, and from something he did he gathered that the doctor had something to do with it. When the usual toast was proposed, Captain Wilcox got up from his seat, and, lifting his glass as though he were about to drink, suddenly held it out to the doctor, saying, "Let us change glasses, doctor." The doctor declined, and his manner was such that it confirmed the Captain's suspicions. Taking a pistol from his pocket, he held out his glass to the doctor, saying, "You either drink the contents of this glass or I will shoot you." The sequel, without giving any detail, is that in the end the doctor drank the contents, preferring to die by the poison he had mixed for the Captain. He died a few minutes after, confessing to a plot to seize the vessel after killing the Captain and one of the officers.

As my informant says, the length of a voyage in those days, sometimes extending even to three years, perhaps justified Captain Wilcox's conduct. The slave was given his freedom.

The Captain married, on the 24th July 1765, Mary Robinson, described as a widow, which is, I think, a mistake, since I find she was the daughter of Benjamin and Hester Robinson, of Liverpool, and at the time of her marriage does not appear to have been more than twenty-two years of age.

Hester Robinson, above mentioned, was the daughter of John and Mary Button. This John Button is mentioned in Stonehouse's "Streets of Liverpool," where the author says, "Button St., off Whitechapel, called after Mr. Button, who was, previous to his death, 18th Nov. 1785, the oldest Burgess in Liverpool. He lived during six monarchs' reigns, being born in that of James II."

I am not prepared to guarantee the strict accuracy of this statement. The inscription on his tombstone in St. Peter's Churchyard said that he died on the 13th November 1785 in the ninety-fifth year of his age, which, I think, would barely carry him back to James II., though very nearly.

In connection with this John Button there is one rather interesting incident, viz. he told his great-grandson, also a Daniel Wilcox (son of the Captain), and he passed the story on to John Button Wilcox, his son, who told the story to his grandson, the writer of this paper, that he, John Button, had been present at the opening of St. Peter's Church, and had been on that occasion on the top of the tower, and from there at that time it was almost possible to count all the houses in Liverpool. That was in 1704, thus making a link between the John Button born in or about James II.'s reign and the writer in Edward VII.'s reign, a period of over two hundred years, during which time Liverpool has risen from a large village to be the second city of the Empire.

Perhaps the strangest coincidence occurs in connection with the bowl itself. The writer, some years ago, happening to go into Branch & Leete's sale-rooms, was astonished to find this bowl there prepared for an auction. Needless to say the writer secured it, and thus it returns to the descendant of the first owner after a gap of somewhere about one hundred and twenty years.

Experts may, perhaps, be able to say in what particular pottery it was manufactured, but I may hazard a guess that if the owner of the Hero was a member of the Shaw family of potters, then possibly this bowl may have been one of their manufacture. They were the makers of the celebrated "Golden Lion" bowl, now in the Liverpool Museum.

I have nothing more to say. No doubt many other members have particulars connected with their ancestry just as interesting if search were made. My excuse for troubling you with these particulars must be the great interest I take in anything connected with the good old town of which we are all so proud.

May I just add that I append a copy of the will of John Button, as it may be useful in giving particulars of various inhabitants of Liverpool at the date on which it was made, viz. 17th February 1768.

BUTTON STREET

23rd January 1722.—Lease granted of a piece of land and two messuages having a frontage of 8 yards to Frog Lane (Whitechapel) of a depth along the north side of Button Street of 27 yards.

Term 3 lives of 21 years. The lives were—the Lessee John Button, Mary his wife and Esther his daughter.

5th August 1747.—Above Lease renewed to same. Description—2 houses and several cottages.

Lives—Lessee, Mary daughter of Benj$^{n.}$ Robinson and Esther wife of s^{d} Benj$^{n.}$ R.

This Street was evidently formed about the time the Pool was filled up and Frog Lane formed on the site. It is only now about 20 yards in length, and was in all probability merely a passage, at this time, from Frog Lane to Rainford's Gardens immediately in the rear. It was customary, especially in this neighbourhood, to name the streets after the owners or lessees of abutting lands, and that this was done in the case of Button Street seems conclusive.

In 1802 part of the above Lease was sold (Revōn) to W$^{m.}$ Rathbone.

In 1803 other part sold to W$^{m.}$ Gregson.

The remainder expired, and the name of Button is not again recorded.

SOME ARMORIAL HOUSE-TABLETS IN LANCASHIRE

Drawn by W. F. Price, with Notes by J. Paul Rylands, F.S.A., and the Artist

THE illustration of fifty examples of house-tablets in Mr. Price's work, "Inscribed and Dated Stones on some old Lancashire Houses,"[1] excited a good deal of local interest, although these tablets, with two exceptions, were not armorial, and for the most part related to persons of yeoman rank. It has been suggested that a series of drawings of local house-tablets displaying armorial bearings would be of even more interest, and might be issued from time to time in the volumes of the Historic Society; accordingly, as a first instalment, the accompanying six drawings have been made by Mr. Price.

Commencing within a radius of a few miles from Liverpool, the locality of the first four illustrations may be found to the north of the city, in the flat tract of country around Aintree and Altcar; the world-wide fame of these two places might entitle this district to be termed the Sportsman's Corner of Lancashire.

The tablets shown in Figs. 1 and 2 are both at Stand House, Netherton. Stand House is situated one mile to the west of Aintree Station; the house itself presents no features of interest, has probably been altered from time to time, and is now used as a farm-house. It was the residence of the Molyneux family until their removal to Croxteth Hall in the eighteenth century. Fig. 1 represents the keystone of the arched door of the barn; the shield and cross are cut in relief, and the initials and date, CM 1740, are incised. The stone is somewhat weathered and damaged.

Fig. 2 is a carved panel inserted in the stonework on the north side of a building at Stand House known as "the deer-house." The deer-house is built of yellow sandstone, and, owing to the soft nature of the stone, the panel is very much weathered; the shield and supporters are in relief, and the initials and date, CM 1741, are incised.

These stones both display the armorial bearings of Caryll, sixth Viscount Molyneux of Maryborough, who succeeded to the title in 1738 on the death of his brother, died unmarried, and was buried at Sefton Church, 13th November 1745.

Fig. 3 may be found on the front of a farm-house of quite modern appearance, about half a mile north-west of Aintree Station. The house faces the road and racecourse, and in the Ordnance Survey Maps is dignified by the appellation "Hall."

This stone panel, carved in high relief, is still in a good state of preservation. The initials $\frac{M}{RM}$ stand for Richard, fifth Viscount Molyneux, who succeeded to the peerage on the death of his father in 1718, died without male issue, and was buried at Sefton Church, 15th December 1738, aged 60. He had married, in or about 1705, Mary, daughter of Francis, Lord Brudenell, but their only son, William, died in 1706; their daughter, Mary, became the wife first of Thomas Clifton of Lytham, and secondly of William Anderton of Euxton. The Hon. Richard Molyneux was one of the English Catholic Nonjurors of 1715 who refused to take the oaths to George II.; he then had a house at Much Woolton.

The next illustration, Fig. 4, is at Goore Houses, in Altcar, a mile and a half north-west from Maghull Station. Goore Houses are a group of isolated farmsteads on the eastern border of the great plain of fertile meadow lands, through which the little river Alt finds its way to the sea.

The house into which this panel has been inserted has probably undergone some re-building; it is built or faced with brick, and stands upon a stone plinth, has no architectural features of interest, and is now used as a farm-house. The panel is formed of a solid slab of stone, with a brick weather moulding; the carving is in relief, and the stone has been painted cream colour, with the lettering, date, and crosses dark red. It is dated 1596, and has an unusual heraldic display of three shields. The larger one, which is above the other two, bears the plain cross-moline of the family of Molyneux of Sefton, and is probably intended to represent the landlord and lessor. The other two shields, which are side by side, we may assume to be those of the lessee and his wife. They show (1) the arms of Molyneux, with a lozenge-shaped piercing in the centre of the cross-moline, and (2) the well-known coat of Osbaldeston of Osbaldeston.

It is not easy to give an exact explanation of these three shields, but Mr. R. D. Radcliffe has kindly supplied the following note concerning the Molyneux and Osbaldeston alliances:—

Sir William Molyneux, of Sefton, Knight, fought at Flodden, and died in 1548. He married, as his second wife, Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of Cuthbert Clifton, by whom he had (among others) a son, Thomas, who married Cecily, one of the daughters of Sir Alexander Osbaldeston, of Osbaldeston, Knight, who died in 1543. Her half-brother, John Osbaldeston, born 1507, died 1575–76, paid through his tenant, the widow of Laurence Baron, rent for "the half of Edge" in Sefton, and rent for a tenement in Netherton also, to Sir Richard Molyneux.

Cecily's sister-in-law, Eleanor, wife of her brother, Richard Osbaldeston, was living in Sefton in 1599. Eleanor's son, Edward Osbaldeston, married Margaret, daughter of John Molyneux, of Little Crosby, who was the third son of Sir Richard Molyneux, who died in 1568.

Another panel on the barn of this farm at Goore Houses is figured in "Inscribed and Dated Stones," page 34; this displays the Molyneux cross (not on a shield), accompanied by the initials $\frac{A}{TA}$ of some tenant and the date 1741.

In Figs. 5 and 6 we have representations of the Eagle and Child, a cognisance of the House of Stanley, and the branches and leaves of a tree in each case show that the carving is intended to allude to the well-known legend of Oskatel de Lathom.

Fig. 5 is over the door of the west wing of Holland House, situated half a mile to the north of the village of Upholland in the parish of Wigan. Upholland is a quaint hill-side village, with steep and crooked streets; its beautiful Priory Church is about to be "restored" to celebrate the sixth centenary of the foundation of the Priory.

Holland House is approached through an avenue of trees—the house has been modernised—and externally is of no interest apart from the traces it bears in heraldic tablets and old spout-heads of its former owners or tenants. At the time this sketch was taken an old inhabitant of the village stated that he remembered a long stone terrace in front of the house on the south side. This has long since been removed. Some old ball finials were lying about, along with the remains of an arched stone doorway, probably a portion of the old entrance porch.

The panel, Fig. 5, was set up in the lifetime of Charles, eighth Earl of Derby, and is dated 1654. There is another and older panel, with shield, crest, helm and mantling, in the east wing of Holland House, dated 1619, but it has suffered so much from damage and weather that it is difficult to make out the details of the carving with certainty. The arms are evidently intended for those of the Holme family, who had been settled in Upholland since 1605, but they are incorrectly represented, and it is clear they were carved by some one who had no knowledge of heraldry. Instead of displaying Barry of eight and a canton charged with a chaplet, there are two thin bars, and on a canton four crosses patée 2 and 2. The crest, which should be a lion's head erased, ensigned with a cap of maintenance, appears as a demi-animal, with one paw, which looks like a badly-formed griffin. In the interior of Holland House there is a fine oak-panelled room, the panelling now painted white, and at the back of the house an old leaden spout-head marked $\frac{\text{H}}{\text{E M.}}$ 1707. These initials probably refer to Edward Holme and his wife, who was a daughter of Walter Hastings, a direct descendant of Francis Hastings, K.G., Earl of Huntingdon. Their son Hugh married Ann Bankes of Winstanley in 1731 (see Lanc. and Chesh. Hist. and Gen. Notes, vol. ii. page 207).

Over the lintel of the back-door may be seen the initials I.A., which perhaps relate to one of the Ashurst family, and on the south side of the house there is another leaden spout-head bearing the letters and date R B C. 1747. These may relate to some tenant or possibly to one of the Bootle family.

Fig. 6 represents a panel on an old stone-built house, on the north side of the churchyard of Upholland, locally known as "Derby House," and perhaps formerly used for the Court's Leet of the Earl of Derby. The carving is considerably weathered. This panel, dated 1633, was set up in the lifetime of James Stanley, seventh Earl of Derby, known as "the Martyr Earl," who was beheaded at Bolton in 1651.

At the back of "Derby House" there is another panel showing the Legs of Man, another cognisance of the Stanleys, with the initials I. L. S., R.C. IC. and the date 1633; this is figured and described in "Inscribed and Dated Stones," page 50.

Close to Pimbo Lane Station and about a mile from the village of Upholland there is an old house known as "the Balcony." It is built of stone, and is approached through a pair of fine gate-piers with ball finials. The house is entered from a square porch, over which is a stone panel of the Eagle and Child. No date is visible, and the panel is much weathered.

COMMUNICATIONS

EXEMPLIFICATION AND CONFIRMATION OF THE BOOTH ARMS AND QUARTERINGS BY ROBERT COOKE, ESQUIRE, CLARENCEUX KING OF ARMS, TO WILLIAM BOOTH, ESQUIRE, OF LONDON, 1st April 1580; 21st Elizabeth.[1]

Communicated by W. Harry Rylands, F.S.A.

THE subjoined document has been copied verbatim from an old copy made by Samuel Evans, who appears to have examined it with the original. The blank which will be observed between the words "jure" and "derivetur" occurs in Evans' copy, and also the inaccuracies which have been here corrected in square brackets.

Clarenceux evidently took the pedigree contained in the recitals from that entered at the Visitation of Cheshire in 1580 (Harleian Society, vol. xviii. pp. 35–37), which begins with "Thomalin Booth of Barton in Lancastr," whose actual name was John.

The quarterings are: (1) Booth; (2) Mascy, of [1] So dated, but the 1st April in the 21st year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth was in 1579.

Dunham Mascy, co. Chester; (3) Venables, of Bollin, co. Chester; (4) Whitney; (5) Fitton, of Bollin, co. Chester; (6) Orreby, of Gawsworth, co. Chester; (7) Thornton, of Thornton, co. Chester; (8) Helsby, of Helsby, co. Chester; (9) Montfort, of Bescote, co. Stafford; (10) Ashton, of Ashton-under-Lyne, co. Lancaster; and (11) Stayley.

These are marshalled according to the achievement entered in 1580, omitting the so-called Barton coat, two Kingsley coats, and a final quartering which is at present unidentified (ibid., p. 35).

Other particulars of the Booth arms will be found in the Visitation of Lancashire, 1533 (Chetham Society), p. 79, and Local Gleanings Magazine, 1879–80, pp. 19–27.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE'S HOUSE IN ROCK PARK

The following letter addressed to the Editor of the Liverpool Mercury is worthy of being placed on permanent record here, as a vindication of the action of the Sub-Committee of this Society which deals with the matter of Memorial Tablets :—

Dear Sir,—In your recent review of Mr. Julian Hawthorne's new work, entitled "Hawthorne and his Circle," your reviewer cites the author's account of how he identified the house his father had occupied at Rock Ferry as a noticeable example of bad taste. As the matter is one of considerable local interest, may I hope that you will find space in an early issue for the account referred to and the appended correction thereof? Mr. Julian Hawthorne writes (p. 122) as follows :—

"As I have already made one confession in these pages not reflecting credit upon myself, I may as well make another now. Just thirty years after the events I am describing, somebody wrote to me from Rock Park, stating that the local inhabitants were desirous of putting up on the house which Hawthorne had occupied there, a marble or bronze slab recording the fact for the benefit of pilgrims. The Committee, however, did not know which of three or four houses was the right one, and the writer enclosed photographs of them all, and requested me to put a cross over our former habitation. Now, all the houses in Rock Park had been turned out of the same mould, and I knew no more than my interrogator which was which. But I reflected that the Committee had been put to trouble and expense for photographs, postage stamps and what not, and that all that was really wanted was something to be sentimental over. So, rather than disappoint them, I resorted to a kind of sortes virgilianæ; I shut my eyes, turned round thrice, and made a mark at hazard on the line of photographs. The chances against my having hit it right were only four to one; the Committee were satisfied, the pilgrims have been made happy, and it is difficult to see where harm has been done. Nevertheless, the matter has weighed somewhat on my conscience ever since, and I am glad to have thus lightened myself of it."

From the inquiries I have made I can only conclude that Mr. Julian Hawthorne is labouring under an extraordinary delusion. There are no grounds for the regrets which have caused his peculiar confession, but, on the other hand, the confession must cause many regrets. No tablet has ever been placed on the house wherein Nathaniel Hawthorne and his family resided in Rock Park, Rock Ferry.

The facts are as follows:—In the year 1891 the vicar of Rock Ferry (the Rev. W. L. Paige-Cox) and the editor of Wirral Notes and Queries (the Rev. Francis Sanders) desired to identify the house in Rock Park where Nathaniel Hawthorne lived when he was the American Consul at Liverpool. In the course of the inquiries Mr. Paige-Cox wrote to the then American Consul, Mr. Thomas H. Sherman. Mr. Sherman wrote to Mr. Julian Hawthorne, and received a reply which was published and now lies before me. In the reply to Mr. Sherman, Mr. Julian Hawthorne expressed himself as "much gratified to hear of the proposed placing of a tablet on the house." He described the houses as he remembered them, quoted a description from his mother's diary, and amongst other information, gave (correctly) the name of "our next-door neighbours on the left as you faced the house." There is no reference to photographs in the letter, as there would have been if any had been sent to be marked. Both Mr. Paige-Cox and Mr. Sanders have informed me that no photographs were taken, and consequently none were sent to Mr. Julian Hawthorne. Mr. Sanders published in the Wirral Notes and Queries for May 1892 (vol. i. pp. 34–6) an account of "Hawthorne's Home in Rock Park." The article is illustrated with a view of the house. The illustration was not taken from a photograph, but from a pen and ink drawing. At the end of the article Mr. Sanders appealed for subscriptions to defray the cost of a tablet. No subscriptions were received, no tablet was erected, and consequently there have been no pilgrims to be made happy. Mr. Julian Hawthorne asks if any harm has been done? Retrospectively, no. Prospectively, yes. If a tablet should ever be placed on the house, Mr. Julian Hawthorne's extraordinary confession will be repeatedly quoted to throw doubt on the identity of the house, and so ridicule those who may have placed a tablet thereon. To have prevented a tablet from being placed on the house is not a very serious matter, but it should not have been done in such a peculiar manner by the son of the man to whose memory the tablet would be intended as a mark of respect.

About the year 1896, the Historic Society of Lancashire and Cheshire took up the work of erecting tablets on houses in this district with which distinguished people have been associated. My reason for troubling you now is to assure the public who have so kindly contributed to the cost of the tablets we have erected, that every care has been taken to accurately identify the houses. No memory is trusted unless it confirms, or is confirmed by, authentic records. The advantage of this system is that it prevents the Committee from being fooled by any humorist — either American or English. The defect of the system is that it will not prevent any humorist from thinking that he has fooled the Committee. With apologies for troubling you at such length.

George T. Shaw,

FACSIMILE OF THE TITLE-PAGE TO THE FIRST LIVERPOOL DIRECTORY

HISTORY OF THE LIVERPOOL DIRECTORIES

By George T. Shaw

IN the course of my work as Hon. Secretary of the Memorial Tablets Sub-Committee of the Lancashire and Cheshire Historic Society, I have frequently had occasion to regret that the Liverpool directories of the eighteenth century and of the early part of the nineteenth century do not contain lists of the inhabitants arranged under the names of the streets wherein they resided. When I was identifying the house in which Mrs. Hemans was born, I had to copy out of several directories the names of the residents in Duke Street. As a Librarian I have noticed that such lists would have been of assistance to other people. I therefore ventured to inform the Council of the Historic Society that my sister and I would willingly compile a street directory for the year 1766 if they would print it, a suggestion they readily assented to, and the result of our labours is appended.

Apart from its use as showing the distribution of people in the town, this directory will be of value as a guide to the streets. Care has been taken to accurately locate each street, and only one, viz. Rainford Buildings, has not been identified. Where names have been changed there are references from the modern titles, and the word "abolished" has been added to the names of streets done away with.

One of the first results of the list is to enable us to correct what was probably a printer's error in Enfield's "History of Liverpool."[1] Referring to Perry's plan of the town, published in 1769, Enfield said :—

"It may not be improper to mention the changes which have taken place in the names of some streets, in consequence of the late improvement of writing the names at the end of each. . . ."

A list of streets with their changed names is then given, the last five of which should be as follows :—

In Perry's Plan.	Present Names (1774).
Old Tower	Church Alley
Potato Market	Castle Ditch
Rosemary Lane	Fazakerley Street
Sea Bank	Sea Brow
Squire's Garden	Chorley Street

Hitherto the first directory of Liverpool has generally been used as a base for an anecdotal lecture, but by means of this list of the streets and their residents it is now possible to be analytical—to leave conjecture, or what J. Wallace[2] has called the "doctrine of supposes," and to get nearer to facts. The first statement to be corrected is that socially there was an "east end" and a "west end" to the town. It may be taken for granted that some of the richer people resided on the outskirts, but the list shows that the merchants, professional men, tradesmen, and labourers were in every street.

It would be interesting to know upon what plan John Gore compiled his first directory. The population of the town in 1766 was about 30,000, and the number of houses has been estimated at about 6000. The directory contains 1134 names, or less than a fifth of the estimated number of householders. On the title-page the directory is described as "an alphabetical list of the merchants, tradesmen, and principal inhabitants." What was the "hall-mark" of respectability on those included?

[1] Second edition, p. 21.
[2] "General and Descriptive History of . . . Liverpool," 1795, p. 72.

According to Williamson's plan[1] there were about 166 streets, but in the directory there are the names of only 106[2] (exclusive of dock addresses). Of the 60 streets omitted some would probably be in course of construction, others would only contain a few residents, and those not of sufficient importance to be entered. In the directory there are some addresses—such as Thomas Mercer, ship-carpenter, Gorrell's Yard—which do not appear important, while streets which, looking at the map, we might regard as important, are either not named, or are shown to have contained only a few residents worthy of being included.

The streets from which the most names were taken were:—

Dale Street	69	Ranelagh Street	26
Castle Street	52	Chapel Street	26
Water Street	42	Redcross Street	25
Paradise Street	39	Cleveland Square	24
Old Hall Street	38	Lord Street	23
Pool Lane	36	Tithebarn Street	21
Hanover Street	30	Union Street	21
High Street	28	Park Lane	22

Derby Square had 19 residents worthy of being included, while Church Street could only supply 9 and Williamson Square 7.

In order to make the street directory it was necessary to write each name and profession or trade on a card. After the directory was printed, my sister classified the cards according to professions and trades. Lists of the professional men are appended, but space can only be granted for little more than a passing reference to the other occupations.

[2] In Enfield's "History," p. 21, the number of streets is stated to have been in 1773 about 230.

The directory for 1766 contains the names of twenty-nine people who were described as gentlemen, and many are names well known to us all. Ten lived in the neighbourhood of Old Hall Street, five in the vicinity of Hanover Street, and the remainder in Water Street, Castle Street, Pool Lane, &c. One hundred and eighty-eight people were described as "Merchants," of whom seventy-two resided north of Lord Street (thirty-six lived in Dale Street) and one hundred and sixteen south of Lord Street.

Sixteen Ministers are named, of whom eleven were Clergymen, and four Dissenting Ministers. The town appears to have had twenty-two Attornies-at-law, of whom twelve were in John Street, Dale Street, Castle Street, Harrington Street, Fenwick Street, and Water Street, the locality for the lawyers of to-day. Of Physicians there were four and of Surgeons seventeen (some of whom were described as Surgeons and Apothecaries), and to these must be added seven Druggists and Apothecaries. There were six Architects and Surveyors in the town. Under Education we find two Boarding-schools, both kept by ladies ; thirteen Schoolmasters, one of whom, Egerton Smith, was described as a Schoolmaster and Printer ; one French teacher, one Fencing-master, and two Dancing-masters.

Booksellers and Stationers numbered four, Bookbinders two, while there was only one Engraver and one Portrait painter, William Caddock,[1] who did not attain sufficient fame to be included in the "Dictionary of National Biography." Of Captains and Mariners there were eighty-seven, but of Pilots only four.

[1] This name was spelled "Caddock" in the directories for 1766, 1767 and 1769, but in 1774 and the subsequent issues it appears as "William Caddick."

W. Moss, in his "Liverpool Guide,"[1] stated that "the principal manufactures are chiefly confined to what is necessary to the construction and equipment of ships." That remark applies as forcibly to 1766 as to 1797, for while there were only four Boat-builders, there were many Block-makers, Sail-makers, Rope-makers, Ship-carpenters, and Anchor-smiths. The Potters and Mugmen numbered twenty-four, Sugar-bakers seven, and there was one firm of Silk-weavers, appropriately located in Spittalfields. Three Coal Merchants appear to have been sufficient to supply the inhabitants with fuel, and there was only one Fishmonger, while it may perhaps be taken as a sign of prosperity that there was only one Pawnbroker.

The names of thirty-eight Brewers were included, but many of those would probably be Inn-keepers who brewed the ale they retailed, and a little more. Twenty-four Hotel- and Inn-keepers are here recorded. If these figures could be accepted as giving even an approximate estimate of the drinking facilities in the town, the number could not be regarded as excessive, but, unfortunately, there is another statement of the case on record. When Samuel Derrick, Master of the Ceremonies at Bath, visited "Leverpoole" in 1760 he wrote in one of his letters :—

"The rum is excellent, of which they (the Merchants) consume large quantities. . . . But they pique themselves greatly upon their ale, of which almost every house brews a sufficiency for its own use; and such is the unanimity prevailing among them, that if by accident one man's stock runs short, he sends his pitcher to his neighbour to be filled."

[1] Second edition, 1797, p. 116.

When such manners and customs prevailed there would not be any necessity for a large number of public-houses.

But here I must stop, for our object in compiling the street directory has not been to provide material for an essay on Liverpool's inhabitants, but to endeavour to make the directory of 1766 more useful for others to work with. It is for those interested in local historical research to say whether the result is worth the labour. Personally, I think that it is, but I do not suggest that a street supplement should be made to all Gore's directories published between 1766 and 1839, the date when street or, as they are entitled, numerical directories began to be regularly added to the publication.

If street directories for the other eighteenth century issues be called for, I would suggest that a street directory for 1803 be made first. My reason for this suggestion is that Horwood published a map of Liverpool in 1803 on which are stated the numbers of the houses in the principal streets, and from that we should be able to locate in each street the places of abode of the people named in the directory, and also to give the names of all the intervening streets. With a street directory compiled for 1803, it would be possible, working backwards, to approximately locate the people named in all the eighteenth century directories to 1773, when the houses were first numbered. In 1766 the houses in the town had no numbers affixed to them, and consequently the names of the residents have had to be arranged alphabetically under the name of each street. Such is the suggestion—of its practicability I have no doubt; of its utility others must judge.

Having thus dealt with the first Liverpool directory, it will, I think, be of assistance to students of local history if I give here an account of the subsequent issues and their contents. In doing this I shall not be going over ground already covered. It is true that Sir James Picton read a very interesting paper to the Historic Society, entitled "History and Curiosities of the Liverpool Directories,"[1] but, with the exception of a short and incomplete bibliography at the beginning of his paper, he devoted his attention to the names in the directory of 1875. Sir James's paper proves how entertaining an able and accomplished man can make a mere list of names, but I hope to show in these pages that the value of the old directories is not limited to their lists of names.

As the early editions of the directories were but small pamphlets it is not surprising that only a very few copies have come down to us. There is not a complete set in any library, and it would be impossible at the present time to make a complete set of perfect copies. There is no correct bibliography of them. Picton,[2] Boardman,[3] and Fishwick[4] have all attempted a bibliography, but their lists differ, and none is complete. I have appended to this paper a list, which is, I think, complete, and I have seen and handled each directory therein named.

When John Gore decided to publish a Liverpool directory, he evidently intended it to be something more than a list of names, and from the first the directory has been a handbook of useful local information. To each issue was added an appendix, and it is to the development of the information in these appendices, and its historical value, that I now desire to draw attention.

Gore was not the first to publish the information contained in his appendices, and it is highly probable that he took the idea from "The Liverpool Memorandum Book," published in 1753. In the first directory this supplemental information was strictly limited to lists of the Corporation, Committees of Watch, Officers of the Customs, Stage Coaches, Carriers, and Trading Vessels. In the next issue was added a table of the Kings and Queens of England, and a "catalogue" of the Archbishops, Bishops, and Deans. In 1769 a list of the Judges was substituted for the list of Kings and Queens.

The edition assigned to 1773, as well as the one published in 1774, do not differ materially from the directory of 1769, but the 1773 issue contains the following interesting editorial note, from which we obtain a glimpse of the difficulties with which Gore had to contend :—

"The Editor begs leave to inform the public that in the compilation of the Liverpool Directory he hath used the utmost care and attention, but such is the flourishing state and daily growth of the town, that he despairs of attaining wish'd-for accuracy without its friendly assistance: he therefore makes it his earnest request, that those persons whose names are omitted, would be so obliging as to leave their particular addresses at John Gore's shop, near the Exchange, which shall be printed and delivered gratis to the purchasers of this useful publication."

"The very small sale of the former editions of this work had well nigh prevented any further attempt of the same kind; but the publisher, anxious of contributing his mite to the service of the community, has determined once more to solicit its continuance and support; and he hopes for so much encouragement as will enable him annually to accommodate the town with an accurate and correct Liverpool Directory."

This appeal must have met with the desired response, for, apparently, Gore published a directory in the following year, 1774.

He probably then found that an annual directory was not wanted, as his next edition did not appear until 1777, when the appendix was increased, and lists of local Bankers, Churches, Clergymen, Churchwardens, Dissenting Chapels and their Ministers added.

In the issue for 1781 further lists were added of the local Hospitals and the Doctors attending, Trustees of charities, and a list of streets. Whether the publication of these directories had not proved profitable enough it is impossible to say, but there is no evidence that any directory was issued by Gore between 1781 and 1790.[1] Down to the latter year John Gore had been the only publisher of the directories, but in January of 1790 a directory was published by Charles Wosencroft, Printer. In his preface Wosencroft stated that—

"The want of a correct directory, for this large commercial town, induced me (at the request of several respectable gentlemen) to undertake the compiling of one, which I flatter myself I have completed."

"I mean regularly to publish a directory every two years, and hope that it will be found agreeable to the Gentlemen, Merchants, and Traders of the liberal and spirited town of Liverpool."

Presumably it was not agreeable to the Gentlemen, &c., as this printer never issued another. The appendix to Wosencroft's directory did not contain any new feature, while it omitted some of the lists to be found in the earlier directories.

After the issue of this (if not on account of it), but in the same year, Gore published another directory. The work bears evidence of having been carefully revised, and the supplemental information was considerably augmented. On the title-pages of the directories from 1774 is the sentence, "with the numbers as they are affixed to their houses." On the title-page of the issue for 1790 this sentence is altered to "with the numbers as they are (or ought to be) affixed to their houses." It would be interesting to know if Wosencroft's reference to "the want of a correct directory" had prompted this alteration. But it is in the appendix to this edition that historical students will find the greatest change. In addition to the lists which it had become usual to add to each issue, we find lists of Mayors and Bailiffs from 1625,[1] Recorders from 1577, and Town Clerks from 1568, Members of Parliament; Extracts from Acts of Parliament relating to the town; Bye-laws of the Council; Dock Duties from 1752; Post Office Regulations and cost of postage; Justices of the Peace; and a full list of the "Names of the streets, lanes, &c., within the Liberties of Liverpool, with the number of persons in each house." This directory is extremely valuable for that list of streets, if for nothing else.

Gore did not publish another directory until 1796, but in the year 1794 there appeared "The Liverpool Directory and Guide."[2] This was the first directory to contain a sketch of the history of the town. The names of the inhabitants are classified as follows: Gentry, Clergy, Physic, Law, Traders, &c. The note with which this directory ends is sufficiently interesting to justify quoting:—

[1] In the directories issued between (and including) 1823 and 1845, the list of Mayors begins at the year 1443. [2] See footnote, p. 135.

"Great improvements have been made here with respect to accommodations for sea-bathing. The corporation have just finished (June 1794), at a considerable expence, a most complete set of baths into which the water flows from the sea, and having the singular advantage of private baths introduced into the dressing-rooms, but so connected with the large ones, that a person may either bathe privately in his dressing-room or swim out into the great baths. At the same place are also provided accommodations for those who prefer bathing in the sea, which have also separate dressing-rooms, and every requisite convenience. And within a short distance from the town along the shore are bathing-machines on the construction of those at Brighton and Margate. The whole is upon a plan so much superior to anything of the kind in this part of the kingdom, that it is expected to bring a great resort of company, especially when combined with it are the powerful attractions of the theatre, music-meeting, and other amusements usual here during the summer."

The next directory is Gore's for 1796, and it is interesting to see how that enterprising publisher "learned from his enemies." The appendix to this edition, which extends to 72 pages, contains all that was in his issue for 1790, plus a list of "Attornies practising in the Borough," and a much better "sketch of the Town and Trade" than appeared in the rival publication of 1794. This sketch is remarkable for the following spirited defence of Liverpool:—

"The different Itineraries and Gazetteers, published for some years back, have been uniform in describing Liverpool as it was about eighty years, or a hundred years ago, and mention buildings as now standing that are hardly in the memory of any of its inhabitants, and that it is next to Bristol in its commerce; but it has long taken the lead of that ancient and opulent city, in a most superior degree, as appears by the Journals of the House of Commons. The late demands of men from the different ports, proportioned to the tonnage, where Liverpool is required to furnish 1711, and Bristol 666, may be also quoted in confirmation, and the more modern publications, particularly the 'Encyclopedia Britannica,' seem inclined to pay a proper deference to truth in their reports."

In 1800 "Schofield's New Liverpool Directory" appeared, but as no more directories were issued by "J. Schofield," he evidently did not find the venture profitable. Nor is that to be wondered at, for his directory contains less than Gore's for the same year, and nothing but what Gore's includes. Gore's issue for 1800 does not call for special mention, but the issue for 1803 is interesting because it contains short histories of the various Literary Institutions then existing in the town. It was also the last issue by John Gore, the originator of the publication.

The year 1804 saw another rival publication, viz. "Woodward's New Liverpool Directory." In the preface the publisher apologised for the delay in the publication, and stated that "future editions, it is confidently presumed, will be issued with greater celerity." There were no future editions.

This directory was practically a copy of Gore's; in fact the publisher must have based his work on Gore's publication. It has, however, two lists which are not to be found in Gore's, viz. a list of Pawnbrokers, and the first list of Town Duties published in any Liverpool directory. A list of the Town Dues was not published in Gore's directory until 1821.

The directory for 1805 was the first published by Johnson Gore. In the preface he states that he "has pleasure to announce that he has prepared a new and improved edition of the Liverpool Directory, which under the superintendance and exertions of his late father, was favoured with the approbation and patronage of the public, for the space of forty years. . . . To render this publication as correct a guide as the nature of the undertaking will allow, neither time, nor labour, nor expense, have been wanting. . . . If his endeavours in this instance should answer the wishes of the public, it is his design at certain intervals to reprint a directory. . . ."

The additional information contained in this edition is (1) Lists of London Bankers, Country Bankers, with the names of their London Agents, and Irish Bankers; (2) A list of the new stamp duties passed in 1804. Apart, however, from the information just cited, the issue will always be valuable because it contains nearly all the important local information published in "The Liverpool Memorandum Book" for 1753, above referred to. The following must have been taken from that work:—

A short description of Liverpool in 1752.

A list of Magistrates and their officers in the Borough of Liverpool, November 1752.

A list of the streets, lanes, squares, alleys, &c. in the town of Liverpool, 1752.

A list of gentlemen belonging to the Custom House with their respective salaries per year, 1752.

A list of the Company of Merchants trading to Africa . . . belonging to Liverpool, June 24, 1752.

A list of vessels trading from Liverpool to the coast of Africa, with their Commanders' and Owners' names, what part of the coast each ship goes to, and for what number of slaves, December, 1752.

A list of vessels employed in the West Indian and American trade, &c. belonging to Liverpool, with their present Commanders' and Owners' names.

The directory for 1807 contains a list of streets, lanes, &c., in Liverpool in 1725. The remarkable item in the appendix to this edition is "A list of vessels that have cleared out at the Port of Liverpool, for the coast of Africa, from the first of January 1806 (with the time of their sailing) to the first of May 1807, at which time the trade for slaves was totally abolished by act of Parliament." The names of the ships lost, taken, blown up, and seized, are specially marked. This list has not been reprinted in any of the books dealing with the Liverpool Slave Trade to which I have access.

In 1810 the title of the publication was altered to "Directory of Liverpool and its Environs," and there was included in the volume the following useful information :—

List of Chapelwardens and Sidesmen of the parochial Chapel of Our Lady and St. Nicholas, when Liverpool formed a parish of Walton, and there was no other Church or Chapel of that kind in Liverpool. (1681–1698.)

List of Churchwardens and Sidesmen of Liverpool after it was separated from Walton. (1699–1809.)

Passing the issue of 1811 as not containing any new feature, we come to the directory for 1813, which was the first directory to contain the "Annals" of Liverpool. They occupy four and a half pages. It is also worthy of recording that this directory contains a "list of streets with their admeasurement," and a "list of the docks, &c., with their admeasurement." In 1816 the "Annals" were omitted, and in their place were inserted useful lists of "London and Country Newspapers"; and of the charges under the "New Window Duty." In the publication for 1818 the "Annals" reappeared, being specially named on the title-page, and they bear evidence of having been revised, rearranged, and considerably added to—they fill seventeen pages. We are, of course, all acquainted with the value of the "Annals," but I would remind those who may have occasion to refer to them that they should not be content with a reference to the latest issue of the directory. Since the year 1829,[1] when they began to be a permanent addition, the "Annals" have been regularly added to and revised, and accounts of events which, at the time they occurred, appeared to be important, have since been reduced to a mere notice or else omitted altogether. It therefore follows that the "Annals" in an edition of the directory about the time any event happened will often be found to contain information not obtainable in a later issue. Before passing from this subject I venture to draw attention to one of the entries in the "Annals" which appears to me to be of interest. From 1818 to 1865, at the beginning of this section in each issue of the directory, was the following paragraph :—

"Liverpool Fair-days are 25th July and 11th November. Ten days before and ten days after each Fair-day, a hand is exhibited in front of the Town Hall, which denotes protection, during which time, no person going or coming to the said Town on business connected with the Fair, can be arrested for debt within the liberties."

In 1867 the entry was altered from "is exhibited"

[1] They were omitted in 1827.

to "was exhibited" and has so continued ever since.

The directory for 1818 contains "a list of vessels that have cleared out from the Port of Liverpool for the East Indies, since the passing of an Act of Parliament, 1813, regulating the Trade to and from the places within the limits of the East India Company's charter."

The issues of the directory for 1821, 1823, 1825 resemble their immediate predecessors, and do not call for any special notice.

There is no record of any other publishers issuing directories between 1804 and 1824, but in the latter year appeared a publication which, if it did not threaten the monopoly which Messrs. J. Gore and Son appear to have established, it at least demonstrated that it was possible for them to improve their directory. In 1824 Messrs. William Wales and Co. of Liverpool published a "History, Directory and Gazetteer of the County Palatine of Lancaster," by Edward Baines. This work was much more ambitious than anything which had hitherto been attempted for either the town or county. The section devoted to Liverpool is larger than Gore's directory and differs from it in many ways. It contains a good history of the town (good for a publication of that kind), but its principal interest lies in the compilation.

For the first time the directory was divided into the three divisions with which we are now so well acquainted, viz.:—

1. Names of inhabitants with addresses.
2. Classification of the professions and trades in the town.
3. Street directory. Names of the inhabitants in the principal streets of business, arranged according to the successive numbers of their dwellings or establishments.

The appendix contains much that is in Gore's publication, but, in addition, gives a list of the Mail Coach routes. In September 1825 Baines issued a supplement to the Liverpool portion of his work containing corrections and additions, but he issued no more Liverpool directories. In Gore's directory for 1827, we see two of Baines's ideas adopted, viz. (1) An alphabetical list of the professions and principal trades, and (2) the announcement that in the following year the publishers would issue a supplement containing the alterations up to that period. Such a supplement Gore also issued to the 1829 edition, the idea being to give the directory all the advantages of an annual publication, while avoiding the labour and expense entailed by reprinting the whole volume each year.

The year 1827 also saw another attempt on the part of a rival firm of local stationers to establish a directory. Messrs. Andrew Picken & Son published "Picken's Annual Directory of Liverpool and its Environs, for 1827." Only one edition appeared, but that deserves a passing notice. It does not contain any historical information, and the useful local information usually included in the appendices to the directories was, in this instance, published on a sheet. Very few, if any, copies of that sheet are now to be found—I have never seen one. That was an idea that all who are interested in records of the past may be thankful Messrs. J. Gore & Son did not adopt. In the preface to this directory appears the following interesting paragraphs:—

"We trust the attention of the spirited local authorities of this important town will shortly be drawn to the exceedingly incorrect manner in which the houses are numbered, particularly in the outskirts, where correct numbers are most wanted, and in great part of which the houses are not numbered at all."

In a footnote to this paragraph it is stated that :—

"In the principal cities of Scotland, the houses are numbered thus : on the right hand side run the even numbers, and on the left the odd—alternately—an excellent plan for knowing on which side you are to make your inquiry, if you know the number you want. . . ."

This system of numbering the houses in Liverpool was adopted about 1838, eleven years after Messrs. Pickens' suggestion. These publishers concluded their preface by appealing for support on the peculiar ground that the "undertaking has at least the merit of being very unsuitable to indolence or want of perseverance."

Gore's Liverpool directories may be roughly divided into three series, according to their sizes :—

The first, or small octavo series extends from 1766 to 1827.

The second, or narrow octavo series, extends from 1829 to 1855.

The third, or large octavo series, extends from 1857 to the present day.

The reason for altering the size and shape of the directory for 1829 may have been to add to the convenience in handling it—and certainly the long narrow volume is very easy to hold and refer to—but I think that it is probable the real object of the publishers was to arrange for the insertion of advertisements. It is indeed surprising that these publications were not systematically used for general advertising until 1832, and the surprise on this point is the greater as Messrs. J. Gore & Son were also the publishers of a newspaper, and as such possessed a great advantage for the development of their directory for advertising purposes.

The changes in the directory from 1829, with one or two exceptions, do not call for special notice, and I therefore need not occupy your time with such a minute description of the contents of the issues of succeeding years. The first of the exceptions to which I wish to refer was in 1839, when the first numerical or street directory was inserted. The numbering of the houses had been altered, and the odd numbers are in this directory given as being on one side of the street, and the even numbers on the other. In 1859 this portion of the directory was made more useful by the addition of the names of the intervening streets to the lists of residents in each street.

Although the directories now begin to be uniform in appearance, the value of the appendices for historical purposes is not diminished. In 1832 there is a full account of the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester Railway, and also of the death and funeral of William Huskisson. In 1837 there is a full description of the Boundaries of Liverpool under the Reform Bill, and of each ward under the Municipal Corporation Bill, while in the directory for 1853 is given the Boundaries of the Port of Liverpool, as defined in 1680 and 1723.

In the issue for 1835 there is an advertisement of Leasowe Castle as an Hotel and Summer Residence, Louis Bussard, Proprietor. At a later date this Castle became a private residence, and a few years ago was again turned into an hotel.

It is possible from these directories to trace the rise and decline of the Stage Coach. In the appendix to the edition for 1834 is the first notice of "Railway Coaches," a quarter of a page being devoted to them, while the Mail and Stage Coaches occupy a page and three quarters. The advertisements in the issue for 1834 contain what must have been the first time-table of the Liverpool & Manchester Railway. In 1837 was announced the opening of the Grand Junction Railway—Liverpool to Birmingham. The advertisement gives the times of the trains and the fares through to London, the journey from Birmingham to London being continued by Stage Coaches. In 1839 appeared the advertisement of the first Railway Train to London. The list of Stage Coaches steadily diminished until they disappeared early in the 'forties. But about the time the Stage Coach disappeared the Omnibus came into evidence, and the directory for 1841 contains a list of the suburban Omnibuses.

Students of the municipal, parochial, and economic history of this city, as well as those interested in the progress of its various religious, charitable, literary, and educational institutions, will find that the contents of the appendices and advertisements in these directories will well repay careful examination, and no portion of Liverpool history in the nineteenth century should be written without such an examination being made. The greater part of the information is official, and therefore reliable; it is well arranged and indexed, and readily accessible, as long sets of these volumes are in our local libraries.

If it be true that the history of Modern England will be found in the newspapers, it is no exaggeration to say that the history of the development of Liverpool will be found in the directories.

In conclusion, I desire to pay a tribute to the memory of John Gore. He was but a young man (aged 29) when he published the first directory in 1766, and the difficulties with which he had to contend in the compilation of that book must have been considerable, while its small sale must have been very discouraging. He lived to see Gore's directory thoroughly established, but I doubt if, at the date of his death (1803), it could be regarded as a really profitable publication. We have therefore the more reason to admire the public spirit which, in his own words, made him "anxious of contributing his mite to the service of the community." In compiling useful information for his contemporaries he provided historical records for posterity.

JOHN GORE, 1738–1803

FOUNDER OF GORE'S LIVERPOOL DIRECTORY

(From an oil painting ascribed to William Caddick)

I hoped to place on record here some account of this man, but I have not been able to obtain any details of his life. Gore's General Advertiser for December 22, 1803, contains only an ordinary obituary notice, stating that he died "on the 14th inst., in the 65th year of his age, after a long illness, endured with exemplary patience and resignation."

Some day I hope that more information will be obtainable, for amongst the men who have rendered valuable service to this city, the names of few are more worthy of permanent record than is that of John Gore, the originator of the Liverpool Directory.

1766	John Gore	Only one copy of the original issue of this directory is known. It is in the Athenæum, Liverpool. There are several reprints.
1767	do.	I have seen only one copy of this directory. It is in the Liverpool Public Library.
1769	do.
1773	do.	Only one copy of the original issue of this directory is known, and it wants the title-page. It is in the possession of Messrs. J. Mawdsley & Son, Liverpool. The contents do not indicate the exact date of this publication, and the date 1773 has been written at the top of what is, in the absence of the title-page, the first page. A comparison with the earlier directories and the issue for 1774 justifies me in thinking that it was published between 1769 and 1774.

[1] 1787. In Mr. A. J. Mott's "Chronological Catalogue of Books published in Liverpool to 1850" (Historic Society's Transactions, vol. xiii. p. 120), under date 1787 there is cited a Liverpool directory, and the author is stated to be "William Bailey." Mr. Mott did not give his authority for the statement, and I have been unable to trace a copy. It is possible that the Liverpool section of Bailey's "Western and Midland Directory, 1783," was issued separately, with a local title-page, dated 1787, but there is no copy of it in any of the Liverpool Libraries.

[2] 1789. In the list of Gore's directories added to the 1871 edition of James Boardman's "Liverpool Table Talk a Hundred Years Ago" a directory for 1789 is included. The list bears evidence of being simply a list of the directories in the possession of Messrs.

J. Mawdsley & Son, Liverpool. That collection contains a copy of Gore's Directory for 1790, which lacks title, preliminary, and end pages, but has a label bearing date 1789 pasted on the back. This may easily have misled Boardman. In the Liverpool Library (Lyceum) Catalogue (1889) there is an entry of a directory for 1789. The directory is not in that Library now, nor is there any evidence in the stock-books that the Library ever contained a copy. The entry in the Catalogue is also inaccurate on other points. So far I have been unable to find any reliable evidence that Gore published a directory in 1789.

[1] "The Liverpool Directory and Guide—Liverpool: sold by all the Booksellers. 1794." With the kind assistance of Mr. A. H. Arkle I have discovered that this directory was taken from "The Universal British Directory of Trade, Commerce, and Manufacture, comprising lists of Inhabitants of London . . . and of all the cities, &c. in England & Wales. 5 v. 8vo. London [1794]." The preliminary matter, which the publishers of the "Universal British Directory" had apparently taken from Gore's "Directory" of 1790, was omitted, and the short history of the town re-written. The volume was re-paged, and a title-page added. The name of neither the printer nor publisher is given, but it has been ascribed to Charles Wosencroft, who published a Liverpool Directory in 1790, but on what authority I am unable to say. The copy in the Athenæum Library is the only one with the local title-page that I have seen.

[1] Messrs. J. & J. Mawdsley, and their descendants, retained the title of "Gore's Directory of Liverpool," and it has been continued by the present publishers, Messrs. Kelly's Directories Limited.

[2] In later years there have been various National and County directories published which contain directories of Liverpool, but I have not regarded these as being within the limits of this list, and therefore have not included them.

Without definitely asserting that this is a complete list of Liverpool directories, I may state that I believe it includes all Gore's Liverpool directories. Every effort has been made to obtain accurate information, and I have personally examined copies of all the directories named. If any reader should know of a Liverpool directory not included I shall be obliged if he will kindly communicate with me.

THE REGISTERS OF ST. MARY'S, BIRKENHEAD, 1721–1812

Transcribed by F. C. Beazley

PREFACE

THE Registers here printed consist of the two earliest volumes, now in the possession of the Incumbent and Churchwardens. The first volume is a thin folio measuring $12\frac{1}{2}$ by $7\frac{7}{8}$ inches, and is bound in parchment; the paper leaves of this book are frail, and the edges much frayed. The second volume is also a folio, and is bound in law calf.

The entries are very irregular, but it has been thought best to present an exact copy of the Registers, and to note here the years either missing or during which no ceremonies occurred. The earliest Burial took place in 1719, and the earliest Baptism and Marriage in 1721: all three classes of entries have been transcribed down to 1812.

No entries occur during the following years:—

BAPTISMS.—1722, 1723, 1724, 1725, 1727, 1728, 1734, 1735, 1741, 1744, 1748, 1749, 1750, 1751, 1753, 1754, 1755, 1756, 1757, 1758, 1759, 1769.

MARRIAGES.—1722, 1723, 1724, 1725, 1726, 1728, 1731, 1734, 1735, 1740, 1741, 1742, 1746, 1747, 1748, 1749, 1750, 1751, 1752, 1755, 1757, 1758, 1769, 1770, 1783, 1784, 1791, 1797, 1800, 1801, 1802, 1804, 1805, 1806, 1810.

BURIALS.—1720, 1724, 1725, 1734, 1735, 1740, 1741, 1742, 1743, 1746, 1747, 1748, 1754, 1757, 1769, 1770, 1771, 1772, 1773, 1774, 1778, 1779.

It is to be regretted that there are no transcripts at Chester till 1813, so that no comparison can be made; and it is therefore of additional importance that a copy of the original record should be printed, and so placed beyond risk of loss by fire and decay.

Of the places mentioned in the Registers calling for notice, we have Toad-Hole, ye Grange, Hinderton Lane, Birkenhead Hall, the Rock House, Derby House, Bridge-end, New Building, Slush Lane, Snuff Lane. And I am indebted to Mr. William Fergusson Irvine, F.S.A., for the following information concerning these:—

Toad-Hole was the name of the farm which stood about half-way along what is now Bailey Street, between Park Road North and the eastern entrance gates to Flaybrick Cemetery. The foundations can (1906) still be seen a few yards to the north of Bailey Street.

The Grange Farm, on the site of the old monastic grange, stood in the area now enclosed by the roads Alfred Road, Grange Mount, Euston Grove, and Westbourne Road.

Hinderton Lane is probably now marked by Chamberlain Street, near Green Lane Station, Tranmere, and formerly led to a small knot of cottages on the shore of the Mersey which formed part of the hamlet of Hinderton.

Birkenhead Hall stood on the site of the schools at the west side of Priory Street.

The Rock House was a farm standing a few yards from the end of what is now Rock Ferry Pier.

Derby House still stands in Higher Bebington, and is now the residence of T. W. Oakshott, Esq.

Bridge End was the group of cottages which stood where Bridge Street now crosses the railway.

Slush Lane, or Snush Lane, was the road between the Halfway House at Prenton and Charing Cross, and included part of what is now Woodchurch Road and the whole of Oxton Road.

Snuff Lane is possibly a corruption or misreading of Snush Lane.

New Building I cannot identify.

INTRODUCTION

THE Registers here printed relate to the extra-parochial chapelry of Birkenhead, and although for the sake of clearness the title describes them as the Registers of St. Mary's, Birkenhead, it is questionable whether this dedication was applied to this chapel before the building of the present church in 1819.

Shortly after the Dissolution of the Monasteries, a licence was granted[1] for the performance of Divine Service in the Chapter-House of the Priory of Birkenhead, and the nomination of a lecturer or curate was vested in the grantee of the Priory lands, Ralph Worsley and his successors. There is evidence that service was held here with more or less regularity until the date of the beginning of the Registers here printed. From that time until the present Divine Service has been regularly performed in this Chapel or in its successor, St. Mary's Church.

In the payment of Ship Money by the Clergy for the County of Chester, 1635, we find that Charles Adams paid 5s. as the Curate of Birkenhead.[2]

Sir Peter Leycester in his Historical Antiquities (1673) mentions "Birkenhead Chappel" as a chapel of ease in Bidston Parish, and adds that it is "now in decay."

[1] Mortimer's Hundred of Wirral, p. 391. Mortimer gives no authority, but there is nothing improbable in the statement.

[2] Rec. Soc., vol. xii. p. 102.

It may be here observed that Sir Peter Leycester is wrong in describing it as in Bidston Parish. It is probable that before the Priory was founded all Birkenhead was in Bidston Parish, but, like many monastic holdings, it became extra-parochial at an early date, and so escaped all tithe, and this privilege has survived to the present day, and it acknowledged no superior Church.

The following extract from Bishop Gastrell's Notitia (Chetham Soc., vol. viii. p. 156) will be of interest :—

"Birkenhead,[1] Extra-parochiall, subject to no Jurisd[iction,] Spirituall or Temporall, payes no Tyths. The Manour-house was a Priory, and the Chappell, part of it; the present owner of wch is Mr Cleveland of Leverpool,[2] who allows ye Curate of Bedston 8^l^ p.[er] an[num,] for wch he reads prayers and preaches ev.[ery] Sund.[ay] except ye first Sund.[ay] in ye month.

"Pens.[ion] 1^l^ 4^s.^ 6^d.^ paid by Receiver to [the] Prince of Wales in B.[ishop] Bridg^'s^ time.

"Here was a Priory, v.[ide] Mon. Sup. v.[ide] also St John's Hospital, Little St John's, Charities, p. 103."[3]

The district served by this chapelry was the original lordship of Birkenhead, which had formed part of the possessions of the Priory of St. James, and probably included the lost manor of Wooton or Woolton, which seems to have occupied the north-western corner of the chapelry, including the district now known as Flaybrick and Gillbrook. The boundary of Birkenhead ran from the middle of Tranmere Pool up the stream which formerly flowed down the valley now occupied roughly by Borough Road, turned at a sharp angle, and ran in

[1] Dedicated to St. Mary. Value in 1834, £153. Registers begin in 1719.

[2] Part of this Priory is now furnished and used as a chapel, being a Perpetual Curacy in the gift of Francis Richard Price, Esq., descended from John Clieveland, Esq., M.P., who bought the manor of Birkenhead, and died in 1716.

[3] The last references are in another handwriting, apparently Mr. Speed's, the Deputy Registrar of the Diocese.

a westerly direction between what are now Briardale and Carlton Roads, up Bennett's Hill to the corner of Bessborough Road. At this point the boundary turned and ran in a northerly direction along Slatey Road to Park Road South, then zigzagged across the Park to a point on the Gill Brook about 400 yards from Wallasey Pool (now the Great Float). Turning here sharp to the west, it ran up the Gill Brook to Toad-Hole Farm, through the buildings of which it passed. Continuing in a southerly direction for about 350 yards, it reached Upton Road. Here it again turned towards the west and joined what is now Boundary Road, and after a turn to the east reached Wallasey Pool a little to the east of the Halfpenny Bridge.

Although this is the full lordship of Birkenhead, it probably contains two areas which should not strictly be included, viz. the hamlet of Grange on the Claughton and Tranmere boundary, and the hamlet, already referred to, of Woolton, lying between the Gill Brook and the Bidston boundary.

REPORT FOR 1906

PRESENTED 24TH JANUARY 1907

DURING the year fourteen new members, paying £1, 1s. each, have joined the Society, and eighteen non-resident members have kindly consented to increase their subscriptions from 10s. 6d. to £1, 1s. per annum. The Council deeply regret to record the death of Mr. J. Kerfoot Jones, for many years a member of this Society. Four resident and five non-resident members have resigned, or have been removed from the list of members by the Council under the rules of the Society. The net financial gain to the Society is £16, 16s. 6d. The number of resident members is now 162, non-resident 53, and life-members 17.

At the Annual Meeting held on the 1st February last, Mr. R. D. Radcliffe, M.A., F.S.A., who was Hon. Secretary from 1884 until 1903, was unanimously elected a Vice-President of the Society.

Nine meetings have been held during the year, at each of which a paper has been read dealing with some local subject: the Council are glad to notice that the attendance of members continues good. The Council have to record their appreciation of a generous donation from a member, Mr. Cedric Boult, who on the 15th March last presented to the library of the Society eighteen portfolios containing documents relating to the foundation and early years of the Society, from the collection of the late Mr. Joseph Mayer. Two excursions took place during the summer, and were well attended. Volume 57 of the Society's Proceedings was issued to members on the 16th day of May last.

The Council desire to make a special appeal to members to bring the Society to the notice of their friends and to induce them to join. The work of the Society is greatly hampered owing to the want of funds, and the Council feel sure that if this were only realised it would result in a large accession to the list of members. Enclosed will be found two forms of proposal of New Members, and the Council trust these will be returned to the Hon. Secretary duly filled up.

NOTE

This Index was begun under the auspices of the Congress of Archæological Societies in union with the Society of Antiquaries. Its success being assured, the Congress have placed it in the hands of the publishers to continue yearly.

The value of the Index to archæologists is now recognized. Every effort is made to keep its contents up to date and continuous, but it is obvious that the difficulties are great unless the assistance of the societies is obtained. If for any reason the papers of a society are not indexed in the year to which they properly belong, the plan is to include them in the following year ; and whenever the papers of societies are brought into the Index for the first time they are then indexed from the year 1891.

By this plan it will be seen that the year 1891 is treated as the commencing year for the Index, and that all transactions published in and since that year will find their place in the series.

To make this work complete an index of the transactions from the beginning of archæological societies down to the year 1890 is needed. This work is now going through the press.

Societies will greatly oblige by communicating any omissions or suggestions to the editor, c/o Archibald Constable & Co., Ltd., 16 James Street, Haymarket, London.

Single copies of the yearly Index from 1891 may be obtained. Many of the Societies in union with the Society of Antiquaries take a sufficient number of copies of the yearly Index to issue with their transactions to each of their members. The more this plan is extended the less will be the cost of the Index to each society.

The subscription list for the complete Index up to 1890 is still open, and intending subscribers should apply at once to Messrs. Archibald Constable & Co.
